THE DUTY OF PARENTS IN SICKLY SEASONS OF THE YEAR.

How to Preserve the Little Prattlers From the Fangs of Disease—A Physician's Caution and Remedy for Measles and Summer Dysentery.

We commend the following testimony as to the efficacy of S. S. S, in measles and in fever, from one of the best known physicians practicing in Georgia. It will be seen that he strongly testifies to the happy results accruing from the use of this medicine in preventing the frequently very serious consequences that follow an attack of measles. The resultant effects of an attack of measles remain in the system for months, and unless great care is exercised the lingering poison in the blood will attack some vital part of the system, endangering life. Dr. Cheney's caution should be seriously considered by all who have been attacked by this insidious disease. His testimony in regard to convalescent fever cases and the splendid effects of S. S. S. in preventing summer dysentery, a disease which annually destroys thousands of lives, should be taken to heart by every reader, and particularly by parents. We take great pleasure in giving the widest possible circulation to this eminent physician's candid and manly letter written in the cause of suffering humanity.

ELLAVILLE, Ga., March 31, 1887.—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga: My Dear Sirs—I have used your S. S. S. medicine with exceptional benefit on patients convalescing from measles. A feature of that disease is that it leaves the mucous membranes chronically inflamed—that is, the inflammation continues from four to six months. I have given it to several patients just getting out of bed from the measles, and always with the happiest results.

I also used S. S. S. in convalescent fever cases with the best results. It will, in my judgment, prevent summer dysentery, if one will take a few bottles in the spring, thus preparing the bowels for the strains of summer.

I am prompted to send you this letter, because just now I am aware that measles is prevalent in Southwest Georgia. While I hesitate to appear as a voucher for proprietary remedies, S. S. S. has become such a standard medicine with many regular physicians, that I am relieved of the embarrassment ordinarily attached to a regular physician's indorsing proprietary medicines. Besides, the claims of suffering humanity are greater than selfish professional ethics.

Yours sincerely, J. N. CHENEY, M. D.

MORSE COTTON COMPRESSOR.

Most powerful and effective in the world. Exerts pressure on bales of 5,000,000 pounds. Has loaded largest cargoes taken at American ports. Sixty two of these compressors have been introduced in last nine years, and they are compressing OVER HALF THE AMERICAN CROP. There are ten Morse Presses in New Orleans alone, doing seven-twelfths of the whole business. Several of those erected nine years ago have compressed over ONE MILLION BALES EACH, without defect or appreciable wear.

Their immense WEIGHT and STRENGTH have rendered them the only DURABLE Compress in use, and, wherever erected, most successful and profitable to their purchasers, and saving annually millions of dollars in freight charges.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

THE GEORGIA PHILOSOPHER IN NEW YORK.

He First Stops at the Astor, But Afterward Goes to the Fifth Avenue—A Visit to Cedarhurst Racecourse and the Gentlemens' Steeplechase—The Brooklyn Bridge, Etc, Etc,

Nearly forty years ago I stopped at the Astor house in this great city. It was considered fine then—yes, superfine—the acme, the ne plus ultra of hotels. The aristocracy of the land stopped there and the youthful swells who could not afford to stop there picked their teeth on the steps. It is considered a very comfortable old stone barn now and so for auld lang syne I halted there and took a room at one dollar and a half a day and had the privilege of eating where I pleased. I liked this very well. My room was on the second floor and was just high enough for me to stand up and write my name on the ceiling over my head. I measured it and found it only six and a half feet. There was one little window eighteen inches high and the sash opened on a pair of hinges and the window on the grave yard of St. Paul's church. How immensely grand that Astor house used to look. How insignificant and humble it looks now. It certainly has shrunk down and drawn up, but it is a good house still.

But as I had no business on Wall street I departed those coasts and took up my abode at the Fifth avenue, where everything is grand even to the charges per day, but I thought I would play the consequential a little while, and strut around with the magnates. Senators and governors and counts and generals are common here. General Sherman lives here and he and I pass and repass and take our meals near together and I expect get a slice from the same turkey. He is very peaceable now. There was a time when he didn't divide turkeys with us nor chickens nor hogs nor sheep, but took them all and kindly threw us the bones, but that was war and now it is peace, blessed peace and tranquility. He looks quite old and harmless now and moves about without exciting more than ordinary attention. The fact is New York has not got time to waste on anybody. It is in one feverish tumultuous rush. But everybody seems about as happy here as they do elsewhere. I have seen no beggars no misery. Years ago the ragged children and miserable old women used to be at every crossing pleading for charity, but they are not here now. I have inquired about them and am pleased to learn that the charitable institutions here provided liberally for all the destitute. There are no wretched dens where the starving poor live and die unnoticed and unknown.

It does not take a countryman so very long to get used to city ways and fall into line. The second day I learned the ropes of the elevators and could bob up serenely to the fourth floor without attracting attention. The provincials make a great mistake in imagining that anybody here cares one copper about who they are or where they came from or how they are dressed. I like that. A friend of mine who broke down in Georgia and lost his patrimony, said he had several reasons for coming to New York to live and one was that New York didn't care whether he had ever been rich and proud or not. There was money here and a fair reward for labor and for brains. But down in his old home some were glad that he failed and others pitied him and he didn't want either. Town gossip feasted on the fall and retailed it until the story was threadbare. They even wondered what his wife would do with her elegant toilets and how long she could keep her diamond brooch. "Now," said he, "we are out of it all and my wife and myself and our two children are all bread winners and make a comfortable support. I left no debts behind me and make none here." Well, it is hard to have to go to the bottom of the hill and climb up again after one has been at the top. It cuts like a knife when there is a wife and children involved—an affectionate, trusting wife, who was reared in luxury and knew no wants. As for the children, it does not go so hard, for they can soon acquire habits of industry, and maybe it will be all the better for them. I found other friends here—good friends, whom I had not seen for years, and had almost lost them; but they were doing well, and we enjoyed our reunion and talked gushingly of the halcyon days of yore. The married daughter of an old schoolmate greeted me early. With her and her own lovely lassie of thirteen summers we drove through Central park and spent a whole afternoon on the road and visited the great museum where paintings that cost sixty thousand dollars are mixed up with those that cost six hundred, and it takes a smarter man than me to tell the difference. Just so was I about the fine horses—for I didn't see more than about two hundred dollars difference between Tremont, who sold recently for one hundred and forty-five thousand dollars, and a horse near by that sold for five hundred. It is esteemed a great privilege to be allowed to rub Tremont's nose with just one stroke, and a hair from his tail would bring ten dollars, with thanks.

With my lady friends and some nice gentlemen I went to Cedarhurst, on Long Island, to see the great hurdle races. It was a sight long to be remembered, even by a patriarch, for who ever gets too old to enjoy the beauty and majesty of fine horses, and the grace and power and poetry of their motion, especially in a leaping race? Solomon, and David, and Job all pay tribute to it, and why not we? They admired him when he "swelleth his nostrils and snuffeth the battle from afar." Then why not look at him in peace. Cedarhurst is a high-toned association of tony men, who have no jockeying and many of whom ride their own horses in these hurdle races. Splendid riders they are, too, but I am vain enough to believe that if I could have called back forty years I would have taken a hand in that contest, and not been left far behind. Sometimes I do want to be young again—that is a fact. Most every old man does, I reckon. At least they love to tell about their youthful triumphs. Well, I have seen the day when I was as much at home on a horse as on the ground, and a good deal happier. My ambition was to ride the pony express for Wells & Fargo across the plains to California, but I never got there.

Well, our newspaper friend secured passports and badges for our party, and we had choice seats on the club house veranda, where nobody is allowed but folks of consequence—like Prince Leopold and three or four counts and Jim Keene and the representatives of the great New York dailies. Jim Keene's son, Foxhall, was one of the riders—that is he rode his own horses—only one at a time and he won two races. It actually made me have kinder feelings toward Jim Keene because his son did ride and rode well, and took the peril of it, and because Jim Keene looked on with anxious paternal pride. Langtry was not there but Freddy, her Freddy Gebhard was, and he had two horses in the ring but Freddy dident ride. He is saving himself very carefully they say, for Langtry, and they are to be married soon.

These steeple races are more intensely exciting than the "flat" races, as those without hurdles are called. Some of the hurdles are cedar hedges, some are stonewalls with turf on top of them, some are plank fences, some are cornstalks, a kind of grasshopper fence. Then there are "doubles," where two fences are so close together as to require two leaps in quick succession and last and most perilous of all is a stone wall with a ten-foot ditch on the farther side, and that ditch full of water. None but the best trained horses can clear that, and none but the best trained rider can stick to his steed. Now, all of our country boys know that it is not an easy thing to stick to a horse as he jumps a ditch or a five-rail fence. Sometimes the horse goes on and the boy stops, or the horse stops and the boy goes on. But these hedges and walls are from five to seven feet high, and these splendid riders did not show any daylight in the saddle, but seemed glued to it; in fact, they seemed to be part of the horse, and moved with him in perfect grace. The track was just a mile round; a mile on grassy, close sheared turf-green, and smooth, and the hurdles were here and there on the course, and inside of it at irregular intervals, and the horses had to leave the "flat," as the running course is called, and take the hedge or wall or ditch wherever it was placed. When the race was closely contested, you could see four or five horses on the wild leap at once, with barely a neck between. We witnessed five races, and in one of three miles there were thirteen splendid horses engaged. The riders were all men, not boys, and averaged from 135 to 170 pounds, and they were clad in showy garments of green and blue, and canary and gold, and silver and velvet, and satin and stripes, and spots and sashes of all colors, so that the eye could follow them around the track and not be deceived as to which horse was ahead.

Well, of course, there was betting, but there was no trickery. The owners of the horses were supposed to be above tricks and stratagems. They already had as much money as any reasonable man could desire. Money had failed to satisfy, and now they were trying sport. No ordinary man could come into this ring. To get in a man had to be above the necessity of plotting and scheming to make money. The prize of $2,000 to the best horse was nothing but a little spice among these men. There was betting outside, lots of it, but not on a large scale. Old men, old women, young men and young women, all bet, say from five to twenty dollars, on every race. Some bet on their judgment, their knowledge of the horses or on horse flesh in general. But most of the five thousand people bet at random, just for the excitement. They would pick out a name they liked and bet on it. Lots of men and ladies bet on "Orphan Boy" just out of sympathy, and the Orphan got left. I was much amused at an old gentleman with gray side whiskers. He bet every time—$20 every time and lost. At the last race, he said, "Well, I'll try it once more. My wife picks out the hind nag every time and I have to bet on him to please her. I've lost eighty dollars already and here goes another twenty." He lost that, too, and as he paid over the money he said: "Well, my old woman will have to stay at home this summer, I do reckon, for all her spendin money is gone." But the old woman looked at him with a tone of voice that meant: I reckon I know what I'm about, and there is plenty more money left in the till for me. Cedarhurst is a lovely place—just as pretty as a painting. The deep blue ocean was just before us and the magnificent Ocean hotel near by facing the beach. All along the 2½ miles that we rode by rail the earth was carpeted with green and the fruit trees adorned with blooms. There were signs everywhere of industry and thrift, but none of poverty and decay. There are three millions of people near by to feed, and these working farmers can sell anything and everything they raise. I heard a little girl boasting that she had already sold twelve dollars' worth of roses and six dollars of tulips that she grew herself.

Well, I rode across the Brooklyn bridge, one of the grandest triumphs of the human mind that is in the world or ever has been. I saw Miss Liberty, with her torch in hand, and I rode for miles and miles on the elevated railways that now carry half a million passengers every day. I went to the Eden Musee, where there are hundreds of wax figures, likenesses to the life of notable men and women, past and present. Mr. Beecher is the last, and he stands before you so perfectly natural you wait a moment for him to say something. A waggish friend said: "Well, now, suppose we hand that policeman a dime and go. He expects something." I got my dime ready and extended my hand, but a laugh from the boys told me that the policeman was wax. The truth is, I was too wrought up to distinguish the living from the dead all around the halls.

New York is a wonderful show and I wish all the children of the land could go there and had money enough to stay a week and see the sights. But home beats New York, and right now while I write I am humming one of Sam Jones's songs, which says "I'm happy on the way," and sure enough I am, for I am aboard a south bound train and every mile brings me nearer home. Purify Your Blood

Good health depends upon pure blood; therefore, to keep well, purify the blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine is peculiarly designed to act upon the blood, and through that upon all the organs and tissues of the body. It has a specific action, also, upon the secretions and excretions and assists nature to expel from the system all humors, impure particles, and effete matter through the lungs, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin. It effectually aids weak, impaired and debilitated organs, invigorates the nervous system, tones the digestion, and imparts new life and energy to all the functions of the body. A peculiarity of is that it strengthens and builds up the system while it eradicates disease.

"I must say Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine I ever used. Last spring I had no appetite and the least work I did fatigued me ever so much. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon felt as if I could do as much in a day as I had formerly done in a week. My appetite is voracious."—MRS. M. V. BAYARD, Atlantic City, N. J.

N. B.—If you have made up your mind to get Hood's Sarsaparilla do not take any other.

Now is the time to purify the blood, for at no other season is the body so susceptible to benefit from medicine. The peculiar purifying and reviving qualities of Hood's Sarsaparilla are just what are needed to expel diseases and fortify the system against the debilitating effects of mild weather. Every year increases the popularity of Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it is just what people need at this season. It is the ideal spring medicine. If you have never tried it, do so, and you will be convinced of its peculiar merit.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has driven the poison from my blood, and though 76, I feel active and strong as at 50."—W. H. GROESBECK, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Spring Medicine

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla for a spring medicine, and I find it just the thing. It tones up my system and makes me feel like a different man. My wife takes it for dyspepsia, and she derives great benefit from it."—FRANK C. TURNER, Hook & Ladder No. 1, Friend Street, Boston.

"I had salt rheum on my left arm three years, suffering terribly; it almost disabled me from work. I took three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the salt rheum has entirely disappeared."—H. M. MILLS, 71 French Street, Lowell, Mass.

BLITZER'S PUNISHMENT.

By Wallace P. Reed.

For The Constitution.

The murder of Dirck Putzel was the first tragedy in the history of Austerblatz.

The village was a little Dutch colony on the extreme western frontier of Texas, remote from other settlements, and without railway, or even postal facilities.

For five years the honest Dutchmen of Austerblatz had lived in their new home in the wilderness without having the agreeable monotony of their existence disturbed by a single unpleasant event.

Dirck Putzel's death shocked and paralyzed the entire community. The circumstances attending the crime invested it with additional interest. Putzel had surreptitiously helped himself to half a keg of beer belonging to one Blitzer, and had then filled up the keg with water. When the owner of the beer found out how he had been treated his wrath overmastered him and he slew the offender on sight.

In their simplicity and good fellowship the villagers had never thought of organizing anything like a town government. They had no court, no machinery of justice. Under the circumstances they were at their wits' end. What was to be done with Blitzer?

Several days were allowed to pass without taking any steps in the case. Blitzer went about his work as usual, and kept his mouth shut. He knew that he was suspected, but no one had seen him commit the bloody deed. He was not given to talking much, and he saw no reason why he should go gadding about telling people that he had killed a man.

"We must try him by lynch law," said Hans Muller, one day to a group of villagers.

Now Muller was supposed to know all about American customs. He had spent some time at Fort Worth and El Paso, and his fellow-townsmen looked up to him as a man of superior knowledge.

So, when Muller came out in favor of lynch law, the others chimed in with him, but there was a general call for an explanation of the method to be pursued.

"It is very simple," said Muller. "We organize ourselves into a meeting. Then we send for Blitzer and tell him the charge against him. If he says he is guilty we appoint a committee to go out and hang him."

"But suppose he says he is not guilty?" suggested one of the crowd.

"Oh, that ends it, of course," was the reply.

"Blitzer must object to the whole business," said another.

"Well," answered Muller thoughtfully "that would be very unneighborly on his part, but we could not go ahead, you know, unless it was satisfactory to him."

With this understanding of the principles and workings of the American system of lynch law the good people of Austerblatz all declared that they saw nothing objectionable in it, and it was agreed that Blitzer's case should be disposed of at once.

Slack Van Dooter was the man who was charged with the mission of inviting the culprit to appear before the meeting.

Blitzer was a big, fat, jolly Dutchman, while Van Dooter was the smallest and thinnest man in the village.

When the two confronted each other Blitzer grinned good naturedly.

"You little rat," he said; "I could strangle you with my thumb and forefinger."

"But you won't," smiled the little man.

"No!" roared Blitzer; "I will go with you. Come on!" And he walked off puffing and blowing, dragging his escort with him.

Naturally Hans Muller was selected to preside over the meeting. He had introduced lynch law and explained it. It was proper that he should manage the affair.

When everything had been explained to the criminal, Muller put the awful question:

"Guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty!"

The answer created a sensation, but there was no outburst of indignation. The general feeling was one of disgust and disappointment.

Muller, however, was equal to the emergency. Fixing his eyes sternly upon Blitzer, he said:

"If your answer is final it disposes of the case. But I warn you now that it will not be believed. Your friends and neighbors will always look upon you as a man who shielded himself behind a falsehood. Now, what say you, Blitzer, guilty or not guilty?"

"After consideration," was the calm reply, "I feel it is my duty to answer guilty."

"Spoken like a true Austerblatzer," said Muller. "The sentence of the court is that you be taken to Eagle Bluff and hanged by the neck until you are dead. Will you fix the date, Blitzer?"

"Any time," replied the doomed man, as he picked up a shingle and began whittling it. "Any time will do, and as this seems to be a kind of holiday, why not now?"

"The sentence is satisfactory, is it?"

"Oh, perfectly. What suits my friends and neighbors suits me."

Van Dooter, Zoller and Goos were then appointed a committee to take the condemned to Eagle Bluff and execute him.

Everybody crowded around Blitzer and shook hands with him. They patted him on the back and told him that he was a fine fellow, and would carry with him the good wishes of all.

The committee with the prisoner called at Muller's house where they were regaled with a substantial lunch and several glasses of beer. Then they started in a wagon for Eagle Bluff, followed by the enthusiastic cheers of the Austerblatzers.

When they were about half way to their destination, Goos remarked that it did not look fair and right for three men to have a hand in hanging a neighbor, when one man would do the job just as well. Why not draw lots to see who should be the hangman? The suggestion was adopted at once, and the lot fell to Van Dooter. Just then a wagon met them on its way to the village, and Zoller and Goos transferred themselves to it, leaving Van Dooter and Blitzer to continue their journey.

When the executioner and his prisoner reached Eagle Bluff, sometime was spent in selecting the best place for the hanging. A tree near the edge of the bluff attracted their attention, and Van Dooter fastened one end of his rope to it, and made a scientific noose on the other.

"Now," said he, "it is all right. Shall we smoke a pipe, old fellow, before you take the jump?"

Blitzer, whose eyes were beginning to grow perceptibly bigger during these preparations, hailed the proposition eagerly, and the pair sat down and puffed away meditatively for half an hour.

"Why didn't I think of it before?" suddenly shouted Van Dooter.

"What is it?" asked the other.

"Why, just this: It is nonsense for me to push you over the cliff when you can jump over yourself, and save me an unpleasant piece of work. Bah! It makes me sick to think of it."

"But it might be irregular," objected the prisoner.

"I don't know. I'll keep it a secret. Won't you agree to it to oblige me?"

It took some persuasion, but Blitzer finally said that he would not go back on a friend, and to save his feelings he would hang himself.

Van Dooter warmly shook hands with him upon this promise, and adjusted the noose about his friend's neck.

"Good-bye!" he said. "I'll rattle back to the village as fast as I can, and tell them that it is all over."

He jumped into the wagon, and in a few moments was lost to sight behind the hills.

Left alone Blitzer filled his pipe again, and took another smoke. The descending sun warned him that night was coming on.

"When the sun touches yonder hill," he said to himself, "I will do it."

He smoked on. The rim of the sun touched the hill.

"It is the last time," said Blitzer, "I will see it go down."

The great red orb disappeared from view, but the man did not move.

Suddenly he sprang to his feet, shaking in a fit of nervous terror. His face was pale and his teeth chattered. Some temptation born of the devil had overpowered him.

No longer erect and manly, but shamefaced and cringing, Blitzer took the noose from his neck. With a sharp rock he sawed the rope in two and throwing the noose into the river, he hung the other piece over the cliffs. His scheme was to make it appear that the rope had broken under his weight, and that his body had fallen into the water.

The guilty-looking wretch scanned the surrounding hills. Nobody was in sight, no spy, not a living thing.

With a long drawn sigh that sounded like a groan of despair Blitzer ran madly away and plunged into the depths of the forest.

* * * * *

In their innocent confidence in the integrity of mankind the inhabitants of Austerblatz had never thought of using locks and bars for the protection of their property. They had never heard of such a thing as theft among them until Putzel swigged Blitzer's beer.

One morning shortly after the lynch law episode, Van Dooter found some provisions missing from his kitchen. The worthy fellow could not account for it and the matter puzzled him all day. He told Goos about it, and the next morning Goos came to him with the information that he had been treated in the same way the night before.

That night Van Dooter kept watch with his rifle in his hand. Towards morning he saw the figure of a man emerge from his kitchen with a bag of something. Van Dooter was about to fire when he caught sight of the man's face in the moonlight.

It was Blitzer!

Van Dooter fell back too horrified to speak or move.

He was satisfied that Blitzer had hung himself at Eagle Bluff, and yet here he was plundering the kitchens of Austerblatz. He rubbed his eyes. The man with the bag had disappeared.

"I have seen a ghost," said poor Van Dooter sadly, "the spirit of Blitzer walks the earth to reproach his neighbors for their cruelty in compelling him to yield up his life."

In the course of another day or two half a dozen villagers had seen the ghost flitting about at night.

Hans Muller was the next man to suffer. He missed no provisions, but a demijohn of Holland gin was not to be found. Muller shook his head.

"Don't talk to me about a ghost that drinks gin!" he said to his friends.

Late that afternoon there was an infernal uproar at the upper end of Austerblatz's solitary street. The people rushed out and to their unutterable horror saw the burly form of Blitzer gyrating around like a wind bag in convulsions. The abandoned scoundrel was so drunk that he made no attempt to control himself, but howled and swore, and trolled snatches of ribald songs.

When the first surprise was over the roystering marauder was seized by a crowd of stout fellows, and thrown into a corn crib to sleep off his debauch.

If the Austerblatzers were puzzled over the course to pursue when Blitzer killed Putzel, they were now hopelessly bewildered. An explanation from Van Dooter made all that was mysterious in the appearance of Blitzer perfectly clear, but no one could tell what action to take.

Goos said that in some communities it was the custom to reprimand an offender when he had been guilty of something indescribably base, and in his opinion Blitzer deserved this punishment.

The suggestion met with emphatic approval and as soon as Blitzer was duly sober he was led before the lynch law tribunal again.

This time Muller loomed up grandly. He reproached the prisoner for his bad faith, his deception and his cowardice.

"And now," said Muller in conclusion, "Austerblatz repudiates her unworthy son and visits this public infamy upon him. The prisoner may go!"

Blitzer cowered like a beaten cur, and without a word sneaked out into the woods.

The more thoughtful Austerblatzers said that Muller's reprimand would be the death of Blitzer, and they were right.

For days and weeks the outcast lingered near the scene of his disgrace. Occasionally he slipped into the village, but not a single human being ever looked at him or spoke to him.

How the man lived no one knew. As time rolled on he lost flesh, and the last time he was seen in Austerblatz he was a living skeleton. After that his visits ceased. It excited no surprise when his dead body was found one day in Van Dooter's field.

Van Dooter had the unfortunate decently buried.

"After all," he remarked, "I pity him. His punishment was greater than he could bear. He died of a broken heart.

If the liver and kidneys are sluggish and inactive, Hood's Sarsaparilla will rouse them to prompt and regular action. Take it now.

Chaney Mohair's Age.

From the Sandersville, Ga., Herald.

Chaney Mohair, a colored woman living on Mr. K. J. N. Walden's place near town, died on Friday last, who is said to have reached the age of 115 years. She came to that plantation with the hands of Richardson, from near Savannah, who purchased the place during the war. The old woman was very infirm, but until quite lately able to be up generally. This is an instance of longevity rarely equalled in any country.

Whisky is Still Sold.

From the Tallapoosa, Ga., Journal.

It is becoming a very common thing to see a drunken man, just as though this were not a prohibition county; and it is a lamentable fact that unprincipled men are smuggling whisky and evading the law, and it is also a deplorable fact that our town and county authorities make little if any effort to enforce the law. As the strict enforcement of all laws is the only safe guarantee any county can give its people, every good man and woman should see that the law in this respect is strictly enforced, in the spirit as well as the letter of the law.

If the wine rooms of Atlanta are a disgrace to that fair city, how much more the "blind tigers" of our county? Men who buy whisky in your town tell me there are good men there who voted for prohibition, that know there is whisky sold there, and know the parties handling it, and yet quietly allow the infernal traffic to go on unmolested. It is a disgrace and an imposition on the good people, and on the otherwise fair name of Tallapoosa and our county, that enemies to the public welfare, to Christianity, and to every good and noble enterprise—engaged in a traffic that tends to pull down the walls of society, and clogs the wheels of progress, should go on unpunished

A Brother of Pat Cleburne.

From the Greenesboro, Ga., Journal.

On Saturday, Mr. J. T. Heard met a son of Erin who had suffered great hardships in the "onld country," and had come to the "land of the free, and the home of the brave," to spend the rest of his days. He was the last relative and only surviving brother of the patriotic Pat Cleburne, who gave his life to the "Lost Cause." A braver soldier, nor knightlier gentleman never lived than Pat Cleburne. Peace to his ashes. The brother met a cordial welcome from Mr. Heard, who took him to his home, and called in some of his neighbors—survivors of Cleburne's command—for a quiet, but happy fireside reunion.

ATHENS, Tenn., May 13, 1887.—[Special Correspondence The Constitution.]—With the rapid development of the south during late years, or more properly speaking, months, our people, I am glad to note, are learning many valuable lessons. It is a notable fact that the present high standard of iron made at Birmingham, and other iron centers, has been attained by experience, experiment and staying qualities. A people raw, fresh and unused to taking care of themselves and their interests from an industrial standpoint; a people who, for nearly a century, knew little of how to value their own magnificent resources, could not expect to reach the top round of that same old chestnutesque "ladder of success" all in a minute. How faithfully they have labored since that "destiny of nations" threw them on their own resources, needs no confirmation or affirmation from me or any one who has kept a weather eye open as to their growth. "The mistakes of Moses" does not find a second in the south, for our lack of more rapid development is due to a deficient knowledge of our resources, a want of capital and an absence of experience. But under the ruling of that divine destiny, if there be a rule to human destiny, all these deficiencies are rapidly righting themselves, and whatever of error we may have committed, is getting out of sight like the lifting of a mist before the rising sun. A number of cities and towns in the south have unwittingly hit upon plans for the development of their surrounding resources which, unfortunately, did not meet with that amount of success they merited, owing to a somewhat false premises from which to reason out and work out the problem before them. These lessons of patient toiling for the more correct methods, however, are gradually, I might say, rapidly dissolving, and as Birmingham makes better iron than she did five or six years ago, so the importance of building cities is enlarging by this same patient experience.

I find here in a little town of not quite 2,000 inhabitants what appears to me to be the acme of successful schemes in the development of the town's resources—a scheme that isn't a scheme at all—but a genuine piece of common sense, studied out within the brain of a plucky young banker and his associates. They have seen the fallacy of "ground floor" plans in many enterprises started, and which have caused, to a greater or less degree, a lack of confidence in certain localities. Their methods of reasoning was about after this fashion:

"We have superior natural resources over nearly any locality in this section. Why not take advantage of them and begin our growth while money is pouring into the south like rain?"

Having studied over everything in the way of a feasible plan to invite capital and people, they then went quietly to work and brought to light the happiest combination of advantages it has been my pleasure to notice—that is, just such returns for the investor's honest dollar as would convince him that "value received" was what he was getting when he chinked the coin into the treasurer's drawer. The entire plan and organization will be duly set forth in this letter, and if it does not please any man's eye and put him to thinking, then I am a poor judge of common practical sense. There has been a mining and manufacturing company organized, with enough capital to back all outside enterprises, the stock has been taken and now is on the market. About the first thing I asked on getting a little insight into the company's plans, was,

"Can I buy a little stock?"

And Dr. Young, the secretary of the company, as readily responded:

"No, sir; you can't buy a dollar's worth from us, and you can get it only from outsiders who have bought, and then only at a premium."

This was a very remarkable announcement, I thought, but when the balance of this correspondence is perused, my confidence will not appear in anything like a doubtful light. Here is the Athens idea: They want to invite capital and people here, but they don't want a soul to come with the suggestion apparent that there is anything here that will not materialize into just what they say it will. At present Athens is only a small town, but most beautifully located in the heart of the mountains of East Tennessee, and Nature has surrounded her with richest resources. There is iron ore, marble, granite and magnificent forests, with coal as accessible and available as any town could wish. Now they say, that is, the company says, that they propose to expend $500,000 in improvements and industrial enterprises, which will require not less than 2,000 operatives, or population with families of about 10,000 souls. If a man wish to put in a thousand dollars, or one hundred dollars, he does so under a written guarantee that if the company do not perform every part of its promise, the money will be refunded with six per cent interest from date of payment. All money is to be placed in the Athens National bank, which is under a heavy bond to keep the funds in trust, and to pay it back under the direction of the company in case of a failure to perform the contract to the letter—or to the dollar. This seems to be fair enough plain enough, and sensible enough. But you will ask, how is the company able to do all this? Easily enough answered. In the first place, they have interested some of the strongest financiers in the country, who represent millions—such men as Mr. J. T. Woodward, president of the Hanover National bank, New York; Mr. H. W. McElwee, with Inman, Swann & Co, New York; Hon. R. L. Bright, president Tellico Iron company, George W. Ochs, manager Daily Times, A. W. Chambliss, Chattanooga; M. O. French, Jo J. Ivins, United States marshal, Captain William Rule, editor Journal, Mr. Bean, manager Tribune, Knoxville; R. J. Fisher, cashier First National bank, Athens; J. L. Young, secretary of the company, Athens, Tennessee. Then they own some of the very finest mineral lands in the world, and not a man in the company who does not feel a personal interest in the work, or who does not help with his hands and heart the enterprise. These things give the organizers sufficient prestige and confidence to carry the work through without a hint at failure. The enterprises the company has within itself are of such a nature as to invite a large number of people, and others are sure to follow. When a community starts to put up half a dozen cotton, woolen, warp and other factories, it means business. Then the addition of a fine $30,000 hotel, a $10,000 public school building, besides electric lights, horse cars and railroads, will make the welkin ring through these sturdy old mountains, and they will be lighted, too, with the ruddy glare of iron furnaces, where brawny men of nerve and muscle turn the crude ore into plowshare and pig, scythe blade, hoe or spade.

And now you would like to know when all this is to be accomplished? Well, it has commenced. I saw this week the first ties laid on the new horse car line, which will be finished within the month of May, so that by June the tinkling bells will make music for the denizens of this usually quiet town, suspended from neck of horse or Texan mule. The work of erecting the factories, electric light, waterworks, and other enterprises will begin at once and it is simply a matter of labor and material to carry them all through.

Athens's Location.

IN THE HEART OF THE EAST TENNESSEE MOUNTAINS, WHERE RICHES ABOUND,

While there is not much to boast of here at present in size, the location of Athens is beautiful to a degree, and she certainly possesses rare advantages, for th hills and mountains teem with rich deposits of iron ore, marble, slate, etc., while the fields and valleys are as fertile as the country affords. Athens is situated on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad midway between, or about fifty miles distance, from Chattanooga on southwest and Knoxville northeast, and is the county seat of McMinn county. The latter is located, next to the extreme southeastern corner of the state, bordering on Bradley and Polk south, Monroe east, Loudon, north, Meigs west, and is divided into seventeen civil districts with a population of about 17,000. McMinn county has a scholastic population of 6,500, 75 public schools, 7 high schools, 1 university, 50 churches, 25 postoffices, 30 stores, a number of ordinary grist, 7 saw-mills, several large flouring mills, 2 cotton factories with a capital of $60,000, 2 woolen mills with a capital of $110,000, and a number of minor industries common to all communities. There are a number of villages, the principal of which are Riceville, Mouse Creek and Calhoun on the line of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, besides a number of other villages and trading points distant from the railroad from two to fourteen miles. The county is well watered and timbered, the Hiwassee river forming the southern boundry into which, flowing south and southwestward are a number of smaller streams, along each of which there is some of the best situated stock and farming lands in East Tennessee. Stock raising has been neglected, though the people are beginning to turn their attention in this direction, there being several herds of blooded cattle, the principal of which are the Jersey and Holstein. Corn and wheat are the principal crops, though it has been demonstrated that cotton can be made profitable, the factories reporting a yield of 200,000 pounds. Fruit of all kinds, except those indigenous to lower latitudes, can be raised in abundance. This is particularly true of the more mountainous portions of the county, which will be reached by the new railroad now in contemplation to Tellico. There is no limit to the high state of cultivation under which most of the lands of McMinn county can be brought, as is now being demonstrated by some of our more enterprising farmers. The alluvial lands, which have been under cultivation in some localities along the principal streams for more than three-quarters of a century, are more productive now than at any time since they were settled. Over one hundred bushels of corn per acre have been raised on some of the bottom lands, and as high as 75 bushels per acre on average upland, though the average is far below this. Speaking of lands of McMinn county, Captain J. A. Turley, United States land commissioner, a gentleman who has had extensive experience in farming here, says: "Ninety-nine hundredths of all land in McMinn county has a subsoil of excellent red clay, in which is embedded and under which lies large boulders and layers of pure limestone. Every intelligent farmer knows that with these favorable elements present that worn lands are not only susceptible of improvement, but that the richest, most durable and desirable farms in all the world come from these conditions. It has long been a saying among the best farmers of England that 'lands must be worn out before they are improved.' But only a small portion of our lands, comparatively, belong to the worst class. Most of the lands of this county are naturally strong and productive, and much of it has been well handled and improved. There are very few farms indeed, in the county, that do not have the best spring water conveniently located upon them, and yet a smaller number that are not well supplied with running water, accessible to most portions of the farm." Athens is situated in the heart of the best agricultural and mineral region in East Tennessee, and is one of the oldest, as it is one of the most cultured towns of the state, having a population of about 1,600. Colonel C. W. Charlton, late assistant commissioner of agriculture, gratified with the present great enterprise now on foot, in writing to the Athenian, says:

"Years before the war, to my certain knowledge, the beautiful town of Athens was justly regarded as the center of the highest culture and social refinement. Here were congregated families of wealth and social distinction. There was no town in East Tennessee that excelled it in these respects. It was known far and near as a model in this regard. Of course the late war acted, as it did elsewhere, disastrously upon it, destroying its wealth, paralyzing its industries and commercial resources and scattering a number of its honored citizens to the four winds. The old germ, however, is still there and the new Athens is again coming to the front. It will now surpass its ancient glory. It will yoke on a new lease of life and astound the country with its future advancement. Mark the prediction. Your energetic and wide-awake citizens always ready to do their part towards magnifying and importance of their town, are taking hold in earnest; and now that its press is evincing so profound an interest in the good work, the destiny of the new Athens is no longer a problematical one."

Speaking of our little city Dr. J. L. Young, of Cleveland says:

"The town is built on beautiful rolling ground, with gentle slopes, affording a perfect natural drainage. It is essentially a city of pleasant homes and people, and a good place to live in, with latitude of 900 feet above the sea, and the superb East Tennessee climate, which rivals that of northern Italy, with pure spring water, and fine natural sanitary conditions, it has become noted for its healthfulness and freedom from epidemics, or disease, there having never been a visitation of cholera, yellow fever, or small pox. The high mountains in full view, send forth cooling breezes in summer, and at the hottest seasons the nights are cool and refreshing. The people of Athens have as good society as any city of her size in the world; pleasant, kindly enjoyable, without costly display, the entrance to which depends on good conduct and respectability. Here resides the decendants of some of the oldest families in the state, whose names have been familiar to East Teenneseans since the days of sevier, and the state of Franklin."

People from abroad, who are seeking homes in the most delightful and invigorating climate of the south may be assured of congenialty in this locality, not only on account of the climate, but in political and religious matters. All Christian denominations are here represented, the leading of which are the two branches of the M. E. church, Baptist, Presbyterian, and Christian.

Politically, the white population of McMinn county is about equally divided. Athens supports three weekly newspapers, and is a liberal supporter of all the leading dailies of the state, while many metropolitan journals from abroad have a considerable circulation among the people. Surrounded as Athens now is with such natural and acquired advantages, the new enterprise inaugurated by the Athens Mining and Manufacturing company will insure a population within the next decade of from 8,000 to 10,000, making it not only one of the wealthiest little cities in the south, but a model of beauty, enterprise and health.

A moment's reflection will convince even the most sceptical that with the expenditure of half a million dollars in the way of factories, iron works, etc., such as are guaranteed by the company, must come thousands of operatives, mechanics, artisans, professional and business men, by many of whom will be inaugurated other enterprises than those guaranteed by the Athens syndicate, and all of whom will be encouraged in any laudable enterprise they may undertake. The scheme developed by this syndicate, whose plans are briefly set forth elsewhere, leaves nothing out on which would add to the comfort of a model city. Foremost among the necessities for a desirable town is pure water Here we have it, gushing from the earth, clear as crystal, with a constant flow of 3,000,000 gallons per day, at a natural elevation above the new as well as the old city, to supply every residence at a nominal cost. The contemplated railroad from Murphy, N. C., via to Tellico and Athens to the coal fields on the line of the Cincinnati Southern, at Dayton, with the natural advantages of Athens as the center of the richest ore, marble and other mineral deposits in the south, will make it, in the near future, as renowned for its enterprises as its ancient namesake was in literature and art.

The Company.

A COMPLETE HISTORY OF THE ATHENS MINING AND MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

The Athens Mining and Manufacturing company has been organized by an association of gentlemen who are thoroughly acquainted with the wonderful mineral riches of McMinn county, Tennessee, covering the most extensive iron fields in the world, measureless beds of marble of all the best grades and varieties, and vast forests of all the fine woods used in manufacturing and building, both for ornamentation and utility. The company is composed of prominent capitalists of New York city, Cincinnati, Louisville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Atlanta, Selma, Nashville and Athens, the office being at the last named place, with the First National bank.

The membership of the company numbers in its composition bankers, brokers, manufacturers, lawyers, journalists, merchants and others whose high character for business and whose financial standing is a positive guarantee that every proposition made will be faithfully adhered to in detail.

The company is established upon a business basis and will be controlled by the strictest business principles. The methods of procedure will conform to such practical and practicable ideas as characterize the most successful and honorable business men of the country. The company differs from any other ever organized in the south. It does not commence business by flooding the market with stock at a fictitious valuation. It has no stock for sale.

The company has purchased a large and valuable tract of beautiful land, and proposes to improve it by erecting thereon extensive paying manufactories, thus enhancing the value of the whole, and building a magnificent and at the same time substantial city. The company merits thorough investigation of its plans and purposes, of the character of its members and their ability, financial and otherwise, to carry out its promises with strict fidelity, and of the immeasurable riches it knows to exist all about it. The company will cheerfully pay the legitimate expenses of any competent geologist whose careful investigation of its mineral deposits fails to fully verify its most extravagant claims, and it urgently invites the public to inspect its claims and its property.

The lands of the company comprise a solid body of 800 acres lying on both sides of the East Tenneesee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, in the northern suburbs of Athens. These lands have been laid off into wide streets and beautiful lots, preparatory to placing them upon the market, with a view to building a city. The property is a magnificent table land sufficiently rolling to afford perfect drainage and commands an excellent view of the valley for miles and of the Great Smoky mountains on the east and the Cumberland mountains on the west. Upon this property the company will erect immense manufacturing plants to cost in the aggregate as a basis for population.

The lots which the company will sell will be formally placed upon the market on THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1887.

All lots are to be sold and deeded under the most positive guarantee that all money paid in on account of sales will go into the hands of a heavily bonded trustee, to be refunded to the purchasers, with six per cent interest, if the company fails in any particular to comply strictly with all its propositions. (See deed.) These include the erection of

One 100 loom plaid mill, estimated cost $100,000.

One five-set woolen mill, estimated cost $100,000.

One cotton sheeting mill, estimated cost $90,000.

One 3,000 spindle cotton carpet warp mill, estimated cost $60,000.

One 3,000 spindle warp (for jeans) mill, estimated cost $60,000.

A hotel, to cost $30,000.

Public school building to cost $10,000.

In addition to the above the company guarantees electric lights, waterworks and street car lines. Negotiations are also now pending with a view to the extension of the new railroad to the large coal fields, 25 miles distant, on the Cincinnati Southern railroad, thereby connecting the vast iron deposits with coal. This will then give North Athens her iron furnaces.

The water to be supplied to the town will be taken from the famous Ingleside spring adjoining the property, and which flows over three millions of gallons each day of very cold water, clear as crystal.

The company will also donate sufficient ground for other manufacturing enterprises to any company or person desiring to establish the same upon the company's property, and in addition will subscribe to stock in them.

In a word, the Athens Mining and Manufacturing company was organized to build a city, and it proposes to stop no where short of a full realization of its original purpose.

Elegant lithograph plates of the property, showing the location of each large mill, and the course of both railroads through the town, will be displayed at various points and may be had upon application. Plans and specifications of the mills and other improvements are now being prepared and can be seen at the office of the company at Athens.

The new railroad, a survey of which is now being made, will be built at once, and will extend to Tellico, 22 miles distant. This road will open up the richest deposits in the United States. One of the veins of red hematite ore, only seven miles distant, is seventy-four feet thick by actual measurement, and contains by careful analysis, 53 per cent of metalic iron and only 7 per cent silica. This is the most notable, but not all of the iron ore. The line of the road is literally bound by deposits of iron, marble and lithograph stone, while the lands contiguous to the road are covered with dense forests of all the valuable timbers, such as walnut, cherry, ash, linn, hickory, oak, cedar, poplar, locust, pine, maple, sycamore, etc. There are many varieties of marble, white, black and varigeated in all the colors, and the quantity is positively inexhaustible. It is expected, of course, that the building of this road, which is an assured fact, will contribute largely to the growth of the new city which the company is determined to establish.

IRON, MARBLE AND LITHOGRAPH STONE

Copy of Deeds.

A PRACTICAL DOCUMENT THAT APPEALS TO EVERY MAN'S COMMON INTELLIGENCE.

To give THE CONSTITUTION readers an idea of the complete fairness of the methods of these gentlemen, I present herewith a copy of the deed for real estate purchased of the company. It is as sound and practical as it could be, and offers no sort of risk to the investor. The man who could afford to stand back on an invitation of this kind must necessarily be weak in the knees and have mighty little backbone. Here is the deed:

In consideration of ——— dollars, cash in hand, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, and three notes of even date and equal amount, due respectively in six, twelve and eighteen months, interest from date, we have this day sold and do hereby transfer and convey unto ——— the following described real estate, to-wit: Lots No.——Block——in North Athens, McMinn county, Tennessee. We covenant with said——and his heirs, that the same is unincumbered, that we have a good right to convey, forever warrant and defend the title to the same. Lien retained until purchase money is fully paid. Under this purchase it is guaranteed by the Athens Mining and Manufacturing company, that it will erect and equip, or cause to be erected and equipped, upon the above mentioned property in North Athens, the following manufacturing industries, and improvements to-wit:

One woolen mill, estimated cost $100,000.

One cotton sheeting mill, estimated cost $90,000.

One cotton plaid mill, estimated cost $100,000.

One warp cotton mill, estimated cost $60,000.

One cotton warp mill for jeans, estimated cost $60,000.

One hotel, estimated cost $30,000.

One public school building, estimated cost $10,000.

Waterworks, street car line and electric lights. Also, said company guarantee a railroad from the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, passing through said North Athens to the ore beds east of Athens. Said company reserves the right to change any or all of the particular lines of industries to be erected, but, in no case, to lessen the aggregate expenditure of $500,000. The expenditure of the above mentioned $500,000 the company binds itself to expend said sum as follows: $150,000 in twelve months; $150,000 in twenty-four months, and the remaining $200,000 in thirty-six months, but reserving unto itself the right to expend same aggregate sum in less time than thirty-six months should it deem it advisable.

Under the sale and purchase of said company, it is the contract between the vendor and vendee hereto, that all money paid in upon the purchase of lots shall go into the hands of a bonded trustee, who shall hold all money subject to the faithful performance of specified guarantees by said company, and in case said company fails to fulfill said guarantees in the time above mentioned, said trustee is to refund the money, with 6 per cent interest thereon.

The Iron Deposits.

SURPRISING FACTS ABOUT THE THICKEST AND BEST VEINS OF ORE IN AMERICA.

There is nothing of greater importance than the heavy deposits of iron ore surrounding Athens, and in close proximity.

Professor Joel I. Pyott, of Rhea county, who has been sojourning in Athens for a time, is not only one of the best posted mineralogists in the country, but his opinions are sought by iron men as authority. He has studied the ore deposits of McMinn county thoroughly, and as a result of his investigations we are indebted to him for the following reliable information:

McMinn county contains the largest quantity of fossiliferous iron ore on the earth.

Seven miles southeast of Athens, there is a regular stratified iron ore seam and of regular, uniform quality all the way through.

SEVENTY-FOUR FEET THICK,

This immense vein is only divided by a few thin seams of slate, and the best of judges cannot see any difference in the quality of the ore from one side to the other, but if any difference at all, it can only be told by a chemical analysis.

The analysis lately made of this ore, from carefully selected average samples, ran from 51½ to 53 per cent metallic iron, and from 6 to 8 silica.

In speaking of this mammoth vein of ore, those who have not seen it are liable to come to the conclusion that it is what is called a "spread," or folding of the vein, but such is not the case, the single seam squarely across is that thick at one point, and at a point three and one-half miles distant, by a late careful measurement, was ascertained to be fifty-eight feet of square thickness.

For a large part of the distance along this stratum the ore will average 100 feet above water drainage. The ore is dense and will run about three tons to the cubic yard, and can be calculated to a mathematical certainty. It can be guaged or as it is a continuously connected unbroken seam, and for one-fourth of a mile along the strata to water drainage, will yield

ONE MILLION TONS.

One great advantage this seam of ore has over any other fossil or strattified ore in this country is that

IT CAN BE MINED MUCH CHEAPER

The larger part of the ores used in this southern iron region are taken from fossiliferous stratas from only three to four feet thick, and mining is the largest item in the cost of ores, hence they can be mined much cheaper from a thick than a thinner vein.

It would be, perhaps, safe to say the ore can be mined from this bonanza seam for one-third the cost of the ores in general use. Owing to its structure it can be easily taken out as it is in blocks like a brick kiln.

Another great advantage this ore has is that it can be mined so cleanly, because it is in hard blocks, and there would be no slack at all to mix with dirt and thereby lessen the yield of iron.

Still another advantage to iron producers is that all this ore would be in blocks and not liable to bridge and chill furnaces. Contrary to the ordinary fossil ores this colossal vein is just as pure and high in iron in its very thickest as in its thinner points. This immense strata of ore stands alone, in the southern iron regions.

By being the only known stratified fossil ore in the lower Silurian formations, there is no other dye stone fossilliferous ore, perhaps, in America, of its age.

In making the calculation of the yield of this ore to the fourth of the mile, only the ore of self-drainage, or above water level, was taken into consideration, and there is no reason why this yield should not be two or three times as much to the distance, for taking this ore down to the water level, though a clearly defined fossil ore, only the slighest trace of lime can be found, and that only by analysis.

The perfect leaching of this ore to so great a depth is attributed to its great age, and it has been claimed by some that if it were only of the age of the ordinary fossil ore of the upper Silurian age that it would not contain too much to use alone or unmixed in furnaces. But having had the millions of intervening years to leach it is a pure oxide of iron.

Making two analytical tests of this ore lately, one by a Pennsylvania chemist, another by one in this state, there was but little difference in the result in the three properties called for that resulted high in metalic iron, lower in silica, and medium in phosphorus, but there was left about 20 per cent of undermined properties and as the list of acids show, only a slight trace of this can be lime. The owners oughtto have the remaining 20 per cent ascertained as it would likely be composed almost entirely, of manganese, alumina and magnesia. Manganese being the nearest kindred metal to iron would both increase the yeild of metal and improve the quality of the same, and alumina would also improve its quality.

All the properties of a stratified ledge of ore of this incredulently enormous thickness ought to be ascertained.

The state geologist of Tennessee some years ago visited this strata and reported it to be but it is evident that he was too cautious, or did not go to the expense of getting the true thickness, only giving and reporting the minimum probability, as actual measurement makes it more than that.

In neither the Chattanooga or Birmingham district is there any ore mined and used that surpasses this in quality, and at but one point is there any ore mined that near approaches this in quality, and that is from a strata only two to three feet in thickness.

Taking into consideration the fact that

THIS ORE CAN BE MINED SO MUCH CHEAPER than the other ores in common use, it can reach a larger portion of the blast furnaces in the Chattanooga iron district and increase the yield 20 per cent.

When this ore is reached by a railroad, which, from present prospects will soon be done, this enormous strata, taking into consideration its great thickness,

CHEAPNESS OF MINING

the same, its uniformity and superior quality, will be worth, at least 50 cents per ton more in the ground than the average ore in use in the Chattanooga or the Birmingham iron districts.

M'MINN COUNTY CHALENGES THE WORLD to show another stratified fossil ore of equal thickness, or North America any ore of one-third its thickness of good and uniform quality across the strata.

In addition to this bonanza, McMinn county has a large and inexhaustible quantity of limanite iron ore along the lower portion of the Connasauga on the Butram farm, and on the adjoining lands in a chain of beds, being in the same range and of the same chain of deposits as the famous Tellico limanite ore and of or any of the north Georgia beds.

AS GREAT A QUANTITY AS THE TELLICO ORE

This ore was worked years ago at the old Cook or Thompson bloomery and made superior iron.

This chain of large deposits of limanite ore was formed in the Arean seas before the uplifting of the Appalachian chain of mountains or system of mountains, as the incline of these beds, with the dip of the rock strata clearly shows.

On the northwest side of the Convasauga knobs is a general range of brown hematite iron ore formed after the uplifting of the Appalachian chain of mountains of the North American continent of the East Tennessee lake before the Tennessee river had cut its chanel through the Cumberland mountains, as the horizontal beds on the vertical and highly inclined and eroded edges of the underformations indicate some of these deposits will likely prove of a workable quantity.

In addition to this, there is a stratified bed of ore in the Trenton group, about three miles southeast of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, from a point opposite Mouse Creek to a point a little below Riceville. This seam of ore is high in metalic iron, but in the main is too thin for using for iron, though it might be found thick enough at places if properly tested; but it is an ore all along that makes a brilliant red paint, and is thick enough to mine at almost any point for that purpose.

Mr. Miller, a gentleman of experience, is talking of moving his large paint mill to some suitable locality and thus utilize this ore.

Another iron ore we shall notice in this article is the Gulf Stream ore of the old Silurean era. This entire group being highly ferruginous, the silicious matter often predominating to an extent that it cannot be termed iron ore at all, but on account of being a running water formation, the same strata changes gradually to an ore of fair average in quality. But notwithstanding, some of the furnaces in Birmingham district are using ore of a similar quality with apparent profit and turning out good iron.

At places at this seam the silica will not reach 20 per cent, as on the farm of Mr. J. D. Long, three miles from Athens, and Dr. L. R. Coffwell's, near the city. It will thus be seen that Athens only needs the attention of capitalists to make her one of the greatest iron producing places in the union. She has large deposits of ore and a greater variety than Birmingham or Chattanooga. Though Athens is not as near the coal fields as Birmingham by about twelve or fifteen miles, yet she is nearer a larger amount of coal and greater variety than that city, for Alabama has only the lower coal measures. Eugene Smith, the Alabama state geologist, in a late report admits that Alabama has not even the Sewanee or Glen Mary coal seams, Tennessee, especially along the E. T. & G. railroad, has not only the lower but the middle coal measures also. Athens is only a few miles farther from the lower measures than Birmingham, and many miles nearer the middle seams, for Tennessee, West Virginia and Pennsylvania have not only the lower but the middle seams also, while in America, Nova Scotia alone has all the measure.

The incoming railroad from the south, through Tellico to Athens, thence westerly to the coal fields of the Cumberland mountains and Nashville, will bring a new era to this whole region. The resources of this county, which by railroad will be rendered tributary to Athens, are decidedly variable and valuable. The route of this railroad passes through some of the most valuable farming lands of the county. And when it is remembered that the wheat crop of McMinn in 1884 was estimated at 175,000 bushels, it speaks well for the county. And another fact of no little importance is, that nearly every acre of unimproved land is heavily covered with valuable timber, hickory, poplar, pine, and the different varieties of oak. But the chief sources of wealth in the county are iron and marble. The entire south half of the county is a mineral region. Beginning on the Hiwassee river, these bodies of mineral have a general northeast trend. The four heavy ledges run along and near the line of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad. This class of marble is the same as that at Concord and upper East Tennessee. South of this, and resting upon it, is a body of very rich hematite ore. This deposit of ore is splintered, in many places, into small, but very rich veins. These underlie and pass immediately south of Athens. The next heavy body of marble and iron, taking the same trend, lie about eight miles south of Athens. At this point begins one of the most marvelous formations in any country. Here are nothing less than six patterns of variegated marble, with two strata of lithograph stone, this is covered by a heavy body of limestone, upon which rests the most wonderful body of iron in the state. Beginning at the southwest side of the county, this wonderful output of mineral varies but little from the general northeast trend through the entire county. Upon this iron rests a heavy mass of yellow slate. About one half mile south, the celebrated Red Knobs take the same direction across the county. These knobs carry immense veins of very fine red hematite with interlaying masses of brown hematite ores. There is really no possibility of over estimating the value of the iron and marble of McMinn county. South of this and resting on the north face of the Chilowee mountains is found a heavy body of brown hematite which is tracable for miles. This railroad will open up in this county the most wonderful and varied resources of any railroad of its length on the continent; and we have assurance that it will be in operation before the autumn frosts of 1887. This railroad at no distant day will connect the immense coal fields of the Cumberland mountains just west of Athens with the wonderful iron beds through which it passes in the south. With these centering their wealth at the crossing of the railroad with the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia road, Athens cannot fail to rival her sister cities on the Tennessee above and below, while she revels in the foothills between. But while these developed resources cannot fail to reward those financially who invest therein, yet Athens as a home must not be overlooked. No richer, purer air can be breathed upon the continent. Not high enough to be thin and chilly, nor low enough to be malarious and infested with insects. About 1,000 feet above the sea, and outside the cholera and yellow fever belt, it stands among the hills unravelled as a city of health. In summer or winter the health seeker will almost certainly find relief, and no city in Tennessee or in the south can offer better advantages, nor point with more commendable pride to the product of her schools. Grant Memorial university is doing a work of which any people may be proud. The curriculum and management of the Grant Memorial university is a credit to any city. With unlimited financial resources in easy reach, an unequaled climate the year round, the purest and best of spring water in abundance, and school privileges not excelled in the south, the future growth of Athens is an assured fact.

The New City.

A DELIGHTFUL LOCATION WELL SELECTED FOR THE NEW ATHENS.

In company with Dr. Young, the secretary of the new company, I rode horseback over the location of the new city, which has been surveyed and laid out for the big sale, June 2. To Dr. Young, by the way, is much of the credit due for the success of the company at Athens. He has labored zealously in connection with Mr. Fisher, and is an untiring worker. The location for the new city could not have been better. It adjoins the present Athens, and covers some 800 acres of rolling land, from which some of the finest views are commanded I ever saw.

THE WATERWORKS

will obtain its supply from the celebrated spring at Getty's Ingleside Jersey farm, where the water comes bubbling out of the rocks at the rate of 1,000 gallons a minute, or about 1,500,000 gallons a day. The water is clear as crystal, and the reservoir will be many feet higher than which is to be erected right away at a cost of $30,000. It will be elegantly appointed, and will make, with the waterworks, an additional expenditure on the part of the company of about $100,000 not scheduled above. The mountain scenery around Athens is beautiful beyond compare, and the new city is located to secure the very finest views.

THE FIRST NATIONAL

has now a capital of $50,000, which will be increased to $100,000 in a short while, probably this month. It has now a surplus of $6,150, and undivided profits amounting to $3,100. The loans and discounts amount to $85,000, deposits $35,000 and circulation $11,250.

of Athens now amounts to about $500,000 a year, with taxable property nearly $400,000. With the new impetus given to values, the property will be rated at the next assessment at not less than $1,000,000, with a total annual business of two or three million dollars. There are already here and in operation several important industrial enterprises, among them a handsome new woolen mill just finished, costing $90,000. Then there is a flouring mill, planing mill, foundry and machine shops and other minor interests.

All in all, the city has a very bright future, and there is every reason to believe that the next few years will see it one of the great commercial and industrial centers of the south.

C. F. LOGAN.

O'BRIEN ENCOURAGED.

HE THINKS HIS SPEECHES HAVE DONE GOOD.

The Irish Editor Speaks at Length About His Mission — Lansdowne's Conduct as a Landlord in Ireland — O'Brien's Appointments to Speak — Other News.

MONTREAL, May 14.—Mr. O'Brien arrived here today from Quebec and was received with renewed demonstrations of enthusiasm. Threats from Toronto continue to loom up bigger and bigger, but the editor of United Ireland and the people here who are best qualified to judge assert that they are only threats. The statement that Mr. O'Brien was escorted to the hall in this city where he lectured guarded by men armed with revolvers, was pure fiction. No such thing occurred. His visit here is kindly looked upon by all parties, particularly since he has spoken, which has brought over many non-Irish, who expected him to appear on the platform with a sword in one hand and dynamite in the other.

The most significant fact that has as yet transpired is the offer of Quebec men to send a stalwart body-guard of armed men to escort Mr. O'Brien to Toronto. Mr. O'Brien, who is anxious to do nothing that can be construed into violence, refused the offer.

That an immediate effect has already been produced by Mr. O'Brien's visit is no longer doubted; for instance, Lord Lansdowne, who is accustomed to spend some time in the citadel of Quebec at this season of the year, will not go there this year, so bitter is the feeling aroused against him by Mr. O'Brien's recital of his doings as a landlord in Ireland. As Lord Lansdowne will not be in Toronto when Mr. O'Brien arrives, but at Ottawa, where a demonstration is organizing in his honor, some think that trouble, if trouble there is, will take place at Ottawa, especially as Mr. O'Brien's demonstration and that of Lord Lansdowne's take place on the same day.

Editor O'Brien, being interviewed today, said:

"Up to the present the result has more than answered my most sanguine expectations. Although I have encountered a good many opponents, I have not experienced the slightest mark of discourtesy. I have met some who doubted the advisability of our visit, but I have not met a single one who, having heard us, was not convinced that we had the amplest and most terrible justification for the course we have taken. In Montreal, I find that within the last two days, the condemnation of Lord Lansdowne has become greatly intensified and is showing itself in quarters from which I least expected it.

"As for our experience in Quebec, it was so uniformly satisfactory that although I had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of a very large number, indeed, of citizens of all grades and of all nationalities, I can honestly say I did not hear a single expression favorable to Lord Lansdowne, while his opponents who attended our demonstration were free in their acknowledgements that the statements, if unrebutted, were simply appalling.

"This result is, I think, thoroughly secured—that the Canadian people recognize that a case has been made which must be answered.

"Not a single one of Lord Lansdowne's champions in the press has attempted to tackle the facts of the controversy, although Lord Lansdowne, many weeks ago, through his aide-de-camp supplied them with his version of the transactions. His friends are reduced to two pleas, neither of which will bear the light of robust public criticism for a moment. The first is, that as governor-general Lord Lansdowne is sublimated above all criticism from the people whom he rules and who pay him. This is a doctrine so antipathetic to British constitutional law that I can scarcely imagine how any person instructed in the rudiments of English constitutional history can for a moment seriously propound it.

"The queen's civil list is one item of expenditure which the representatives of the people are not entitled and bound to criticize in duty to their constituents. The fact that the Canadian parliament are called upon to vote money for any purpose entitles them and the Canadian people to discuss, with the most absolute freedom, the purposes to which it is to be put. Their right to do so is in fact the A B C of constitutional government. Much more delicate topics than Lansdowne's conduct in Ireland are constantly discussed as a matter of right and duty in the imperial house of commons. An English constitutional lawyer would smile at the suggestion that, because the queen can do no wrong, when acting as the mouthpiece of the state, the governor general, paid by the Canadian people, can do no wrong, either, although it is shown beyond the possibility of denial that he is using Canadian money for the perpetration of an injustice which the Canadian parliament has again and again denounced.

"Lansdowne's other plea is a still more washy one—namely, that his mouth is closed against defense. His own action and that of his agent utterly confute it. He was himself the first to resort to newspaper controversy on the subject before I had an opportunity, and the first to make an exparte and disingenious statement of his side of the case before I had any opportunity of answering him. He, through his aide-de camp in Ottawa and through his agent in Ireland, has made himself liberally heard in his own defense, in newspapers on both sides of the Atlantic. It is, therefore, preposterous for him to close his door against a newspaper interviewer now, when an adequate reply—if he can make one—would be most crushing. We have not dealt with the subject in a declamatory way, but by a plain array of facts. If they can be disputed, our position would be more seriously damnified than by a thousand attacks with violence of the character with which we are threatened at Toronto and Kingston. If, on the contrary, Lord Lansdowne allows judgment to go by default it will now be impossible for him to conceal from the Canadian public that it is because there is absolutely no denying the horrifying character of his proceedings in Ireland."

On leaving Dublin, Mr. O'Brien says he was blessed and his mission approved by Archbishop Walsh. When he reached Thurles, the seat of the Archbishop Croke, Father Ryan, president of St. Patrick's college, handed him the following letter, which Mr. O'Brien, by a special cable dispatch today from Archbishop Croke, received permission to publish:

[Private.] The Palace, Thurles, Saturday Night, April 30.—My Dear William: I cannot tell you how disappointed I feel at not seeing you before you leave for Canada, but I suppose it must be so. I can imagine easily how many things you will have to attend to and set in order before starting on your trip. Being under the impression that the American mail was to arrive here at 10 o'clock, I had made up my mind to go to the railway stationhouse at that hour and give you a true friend's greeting on your way and a bishop's blessing on your undertaking. But I have just learned that the train gets here about 9:10, and as I always say first mass at the cathedral on Sunday at eight o'clock, it will now be impossible for me to see you and shake your hand and wish you God-speed; but I'll pray for you that the God of our fathers may watch over you on the deep, crown your patriotic mission with success, and bring you back to us soon in good health and triumph. Father Ryan will have a word with you and hand you this line for me, my dear William. Your very faithful friend,

T. W. CROKE, Archbishop of Cashel.

William O'Brien.

Tomorrow Mr. O'Brien will deliver a short address before the local branch of the National league, and start Monday for Toronto and speak there on Tuesday. He will start the following day for Ottawa, where he will speak on Thursday, and, according to present arrangements, in Kingston on Saturday.

MASS MEETING IN TORONTO.

At a mass meeting in Toronto these resolutions were passed:

That this meeting reprobates the action of Wm. O'Brien in visiting this city for the purpose of exciting hostile feeling against his excellency, the governor-general, on account of differences between his excellency and his tenants in Ireland, and expresses its entire and unabated confidence in the high character of his excellency, the marquis of Lansdowne and in his fitness to represent her majesty in Canada.

That this meeting looks with perfect confidence to the parliament of the United Kingdom for a wise and just settlement of all questions relating to Ireland.

Death of Judge Woods.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Justice Woods, of the United States supreme court, died shortly after twelve o'clock today.

DESTROYED BY THE FLAMES.

A Distillery Set on Fire by a Spark From a Locomotive.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 14.—[Special.]—A fire occurred in the residence of Joseph Gaboury today from a peculiar cause. In the lower room is a private telephone. The main wire connecting with the exchange office in some way dropped on the wires of the electric street cars, and when the current was turned on the telephone wire was thoroughly heated. The wires at the instrument were completely burned out, and the lace curtains at the window being blown against the red hot wires became ignited and burst into flames. The woodwork of the house was burned, but the flames were extinguished by the inmates, though the department was called out. The loss is trifling. This is the first fire of the kind that ever occurred here, and timid people are becoming nervous over the electric car system.

At 10 o'clock tonight a fire broke out at Kennedy's brick yard, beyond the city limits, destroying a number of small buildings and the store house. The loss is not ascertained.

CHICAGO, May 14.—A spark from a switch engine at Hammond, Ind., today set fire to the large distillery of W. N. Stowle & Co., which was destroyed, and with it went the extensive butterine factory, belonging to Stowle, and Williams Brothers, lumber dealers. The loss to Stowle $95,000; insurance $30,000. Williams's loss $50,000; insurance unknown.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 14.—Fire broke out at one o'clock this morning in the Park theater building, in this city, and before it could be controlled destroyed the entire building, the residence of John T. Walker, adjoining, and a small tailor shop. All the buildings were of pine and very inflammable and the fire was so intensely hot as to render approach to it with hose very dangerous. The losses and insurance are as follows: Theater, owned by a stock company, $14,000; insurance, $4,000. Udall's curiosity shop, in the theater building, $6,500; insurance, $3,500. Walker's residence, $5,000; insurance, $2,500. A small cottage, $600; fully insured. Several minor losses of occupants of small stores in the building, estimated about $500. Believed to be incendiary.

BOSTON, May 14.—The steamer Empire State, once belonging to the Fall River line, and again to Old Colony line, but later individual property, was burned at Bristol, Rhode Island, this morning. She cost a quarter million dollars to build and was worth a hundred thousand dollars. Partially insured.

QUEBEC, May 14.—Fire this morning burned Rochett's tannery. Loss $80,000. No insurance. Other losses bring the aggregate to $125,000.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., May 24.—The Walling mill in Millbury, Mass., burned this morning. Loss $60,000; well insured. The mill was owned by the Millbury Savings bank.

STRIKE OF THE BUILDERS.

Meeting of Members of the Builders' and Traders' Exchange.

CHICAGO, May 14.—The Builders' and Traders' exchange was crowded with its members this morning, in response to a call of the president for a special meeting. It was declared that the workingmen themselves were responsible for the whole trouble and not members of the exchange, as most people supposed. The master masons have granted all the demands of the men until they were served with a notice, which reads:

"We have met and fixed Saturday as pay day."

That was the last straw. A resolution was passed indorsing the action of the Master Mason association and promising them active aid and assistance during the present strike. The different associations of building contractors, the state board of architects, and the Chicago real estate board, were requested to send committees of three to the general conference to be held Wednesday at ten o'clock in the morning. The following dispatch was received from William A. Saywood, secretary of the Master Builders' association of Boston.

"We are watching your course with great interest and sympathize with you. Individual liberty must be sustained at any cost."

Three cheers and a "tiger" were given when the meeting adjourned.

The Illinois State association of architects passed the following resolution this afternoon:

Resolved, That the secretary be instructed to send to the Builders and Traders' exchange, through its president, an expression of our hearty co-operation.

A committee of conference was appointed. The bricklayers and stonemasons held a crowded meeting today and resolved to adhere to the demand for a Saturday pay day, and to refuse to work on any other terms.

THEY DID NOT AGREE.

The Two Conventions of the South Carolina Diocese.

CHARLESTON, S.C., May 14.—The South Carolina Episcopal diocesan convention met this morning. A quorum was present. The seceding delegates organized an independent body for conference purposes. The representation at the meeting of the seceders convention embraced lay delegates from twenty parishes and five ministers. The convention proper passed resolutions of regret on the departure of the seceding members and invited their return. A resolution was passed by the secession convention refusing to return unless the president of the convention agreed to entertain the appeal of the seceders. The convention proper rejected this proviso and communication between the two bodies ceased. The seceders will issue a manifesto to the parishes on the subject of the existing difference. The convention adjourned sine die to meet at Anderson, S C., in May next.

A TALK WITH MORRISON

On the Visit of the Interstate Commissioners to the South.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Commissioner W. R. Morrison, of the interstate commerce commission, is in the city and will leave for Washington today. In an interview, referring to investigations of the commission, during its extended southern trip, he said that the testimony of railroad officials was unanimous to the effect that the enforcement of the long and short haul clause would be ruinous to the interests of the south. Whether the suspension will be made permanent or not, will not be decided until the full board meets in Washington next week. Mr. Morrison does not think there is any growing sentiment favoring a repeal of the law, and believes that governmental supervision of railroad transportation has come to stay.

Arrangement Between Railroads.

NEW YORK, May 14.—The Norfolk and Western railroad has made an arrangement with the Pennsylvania railroad by which it will interchange freight in car loads to and from New York with the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk railroad. A Norfolk and Western official today stated that the company had sent surveying parties out on the western extension to the Louisville and Nashville connection, and he expected that active construction would be commenced before the end of June.

The Birmingham and Northwestern.

RICHMOND, Va., May 14.—Information has just been received here, through the presence in this city of Colonel T. M. R. Talcott, vice president and general manager of the Mobile and Ohio railroad company, that his company has succeeded in getting control of the charter of the Birmingham and Northwestern railroad, and that a survey between Corinth and Birmingham will at once be made.

CYCLONE IN NEBRASKA.

Several Persons Killed by Lightning—Horses Twirled About.

BLUE SPRINGS, Neb., May 14.—A terrific cyclone swept over this town last evening, blowing down a schoolhouse. W. H. Rambaugh, janitor, was killed. The lightning struck Emanual Rason's residence, killing his daughter Mamie. The lightning also struck a building in Wymore, burning it.

ONEILL, Neb, May 14.—A. J. Potter, proprietor of the Potter house, was struck by lightning today and killed.

RAPILTYON, Neb., May 14.—The cyclone here today was of sufficient strength to move buildings from their foundations.

Earthquake Shocks in Arizona.

TUCSON, Arizona, May 14.—Three distinct shocks of earthquake were felt here between 1:30 and 2:25 p. m. yesterday, but no damage was done. Shocks were also severely felt about Tombstone.

A GALA DAY IN LONDON.

THE QUEEN RIDES THROUGH THE CITY.

The Royal Procession Met at the City's Boundary by the Lord Mayor—Buildings on the Route Decorated—Opening of the People's Palace at Mile End—Other Foreign News.

LONDON, May 14.—London was aglow with excitement this afternoon, the occasion being the visit of the queen for the purpose of opening the People's palace, at Mile End. The route selected for royal progress extended from Paddington station, in the western portion of London to Mile End, at the extreme eastern limit, a distance of about eight miles, and is thought the longest stretch of busy and crowded thoroughfares existing anywhere in the world, perhaps, taking in, as it does, Oxford street, Holborn, Holborn viaduct, Newgate street, Cheapside, Cornhill road, Oldgate street, White Chapel road, and Mile End road. Buildings along the entire way were gaily decorated with banners, wreaths, colored trophies and flags. The Irish colors and stars and stripes were conspicuous in many places. The event was the occasion of a great demonstration of loyalty.

The lord mayor and municipal officers of the city of London went in carriages from the mansion house to the city's boundary line at Holborn. On her arrival they placed themselves in advance of the queen's carriage and escorted her across the city to its eastern boundary, at Oldgate. There they bade her farewell for a brief time and repaired to the mansion house to await her majesty's return. The queen, proceeded to the People's palace and ascended a dais where the prince of Wales, the marquis of Lorne, duke of Cambridge and archbishop of Canterbury were assembled, the choir singing the national anthem, The Queen received the Gold key. Mme. Albani sang, "Home, Sweet Home," after which the prince of Wales declared the People's palace open. The announcement of the opening was greeted with a great flourish of trumpets and this was followed by a grand chorus rendering "Old Hundred."

Subsequently the queen laid the first stone of the foundation of the technical schools attached to the Peoples' palace. The archbishop of Canterbury then prayed for and blessed the people and pronounced a benediction.

Upon the conclusion of the ceremonies the royal procession started on its return. By command of the queen the longest route back was taken, the procession moving off into Burdett road, and going thence along Commercial road to Oldgate. This deviation was ordered to please citizens who had requested it. Arriving again at the city limits, the royal carriage was met by the lord mayor and civic officials and escorted to the mansion house, which the queen entered in state, and for the first time in her life. The lord mayor wore on this occasion his crimson and ermine robes, which are only assumed when a sovereign visits him.

THAT OPIUM SEIZURE.

Officials in San Francisco Warned From China About the Smuggle.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—It is stated that the treasury agents at Hong Kong were cognizant of the fact that the opium which was seized yesterday would be sent by the steamer Rio Janeiro, and the collector here was apprised by telegraph early yesterday morning. By means of a steel probe, various boxes, cases and baskets of a large consignment of freight were searched through by the customs officers, and the result of the investigation was the seizure of twenty tons, or three hundred cases of merchandise. It is now estimated that the contraband goods seized are worth $60,000. This is the largest seizure over made on the coast.

NORTH CAROLINA TEACHERS.

President Cleveland Invited to Attend the Assembly at Morehead City.

RALEIGH, May 14.—Secretary Harrell, of the North Carolina Teachers' assembly, will leave this city tonight for Washington, to invite President Cleveland to visit the assembly during the coming session at Morehead City, June 14th to 29th. The invitation has the cordial indorsement of Governor Scales, the state board of education and all the judges of the supreme court The body Mr. Harrell represents numbers over two thousand members, and it is believed the educational interests of the whole south would gain a great impetus by reason of the president's visit, should he accept the invitation.

MEXICO FLOURISHING.

A Heavy Decrease in Imports—Heavy Government Receipts.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Charles Winslow, vice-consul at Guerro, Mexico, reports a falling off in importation into that country of articles of American production. Especially is this true of raw cotton and tobacco. It is expected that in a few years Mexico, instead of importing cotton, will be enabled to export it. The government receipts have been very heavy so far this month and expenditures less than usual. Receipts are $17,801,114 and expenditures $5,155,165 a net gain of $12,645,949. The available surplus, according to the treasurer's calculation, is now stated at $42,000,000, an increase of about $10,000,000 since the 1st instant.

EXPLOSION OF A BOILER.

Two Men Killed at the Richmand Paper Mill.

RICHMOND, Va., May 14.—At a few minutes before nine o'clock tonight the boiler of the Richmond paper manufacturing company exploded with terrible force, demolishing the enginehouse and scattering burning timbers in all directions.

The main building, in which work was going on, was not damaged, though the operativs were badly frightened. Portions of the boiler were thrown a hundred yards, but fortunately without damage.

Two persons are reported missing and are believed to have certainly been killed by the explosion, Joseph G. Mellert, son of the watchman, and Peter Pryor, a colored laborer. The bodies have not yet been uncovered from the debris.

A Strange Case of Suicide.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 14.—[Special.]—The coroner was summoned to try a most singular case of accidental suicide today. Isaac Tulley, a mechanic, while suffering intense pain from an attack of cholera morbus, rushed from his home to go to a doctor's office. He had not proceeded far from the house, however, before he discovered a phial of medicine lying on the ground. In a frenzy of pain he seized it and drank the contents, not even looking to see what it contained. In a very short while he died in great agony, the bottle having contained what was found to be a strong solution of croton oil, the unfortunate man having taken nearly an ounce of the poison. The bottle had been accidentally dropped by a passing physician.

A Father Takes His Son for a Burglar.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 14.—In Davis county last night, Wm. H. Sanford shot and killed his sixteen year-old son, whom he mistook for a burglar. The boy was a somnambulist and was walking in his sleep. The father saw him and called, but got no answer, the boy saying: "Come on, Dick!" addressing his dog. The father understood this as a call to a confederate and fired, killing the boy instantly.

Stove Foundries Starting Up Again.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 14.—The foundries of this city will resume operations on Monday morning. Boycotted patterns will not be laid down before the molders, as they have been withdrawn from Rochester by order of the executive committee of the national defense association of stove manufacturers. Rochester foundries shut down three weeks ago.

She Starved Herself to Death.

CHICAGO, May 14.—A widow named Hughes died yesterday near Tuscola, Ill. She had suffered from paralysis several months. Thirty-six days ago she refused food or medicine, announcing her intention to die. She starved herself to death. She left a large estate.

THE PEABODY INSTITUTE.

Programme of the Lectures to be Delivered at the Summer Session.

Dr. G. J. Orr, state school commissioner, has about completed arrangements for the summer Peabody institute, and from present indications it promises to be an instructive session.

Dr. Orr will be in charge of the institute in person, but will not attempt to lecture every day, as he did last year. The programme as made out includes lectures by the following gentlemen: Upon "Geography," by Rev. Charles Lane, of the Alexander Free school, Macon; "Arithmetic," W. M. Slaton, Boys' High school, Atlanta; "Grammar," Lawton B. Evans, superintendent of the Augusta schools; "Algebra and Geometry," W. R. Thigpen, Boys' High school, Savannah; "Drawing," Horace Bradley, of New York; "Ten Lessons in Reading," Dr. H. H. Tucker, formerly chancellor of the State university.

Probably the leading attraction of this year's exercises will be the lectures upon theory and practice of teaching, methods and so forth, by Dr. John Hancock, one of Ohio's most prominent educators. Dr. Hancock was formerly at the head of the extensive system of schools in Cincinnati and has since been superintendent of schools in Columbus, Dayton and Chilicothe, Ohio. He has been president of the National Educational association, and ranks with the best and most prominent educators in the United States.

In addition to the above Dr. Calhoun will deliver several lectures upon The "Eye and How to Use It." It is probable that Dr. J. P. Logan will speak concerning the effects of opiates and alcoholic stimulants upon the human system, and Dr. H. V. M. Miller will lecture upon "Physiology and Hygiene." Other additions will doubtless be made to the programme of exercises in the near future.

Last year there were present more than five hundred people, and Dr. Orr thinks there will be a much larger attendance this year. The institute will open on the 18th of July, and will be in session four weeks. There will be two schools, one for white students and one for colored, in separate buildings, but the same instruction will be given to both schools. It has not as yet been determined in what buildings the sessions will be held, but it is probable that arrangements will be made by which one school can meet in DeGive's opera house and the other in some hall near by.

DEATH OF MR. JUSTICE WOODS.

Short Sketch of His Life and Services—How the News of His Death Was Received.

The news of the death of Associate Justice Woods, of the United States supreme court, brought genuine sorrow to the hearts of the many friends whom he gained during his residence in this city, and on all sides yesterday expressions of regret were to be heard.

Judge Woods was a native of Licking county, Ohio. The early part of his life was spent in that state where he rose to political prominence. For several sessions he represented Licking county in the Ohio house of representatives, and in 1858-60 was speaker of that body. He commanded an Ohio regiment during the war, retiring as major general of volunteers. Immediately after the war Judge Woods removed to Alabama, where he received the appointment of chancellor of one of the state courts. In 1869 the fifth judicial circuit of the United States was formed and Judge Woods was appointed by General Grant the first judge of that circuit. This circuit included Georgia, and from that time dated Judge Woods's connection with Atlanta and with Georgia. Eleven years later came a fitting recognition of his ability and his faithful performance of duty in the shape of an appointment, at the hands of President Hayes, to the position on the supreme bench of the United States, made vacant by the retirement of Mr. Justice Strong. At the time of his death Justice Woods was associate justice of the supreme court and circuit justice of the fifth judicial circuit.

He has been ill about a year, a severe cold contracted last spring having developed into a severe disease of the throat. A wife and two children are the members of his immediate family.

For eleven years Judge Woods and Judge Erskine, of this city, sat together in the circuit courts of the northern and southern districts of Georgia, and they were the warmest friends. "The news of his death," said Judge Erkine to a CONSTITUTION reporter, "pains me deeply. I feel that I have lost not only an associate whom I have always admired, but a friend whom I have loved. Justice Woods was a man of most noble and generous heart, an able man whose sterling worth was backed by thorough honesty. He possessed one of the finest legal minds I ever knew, and his capacity for work was something almost wonderful. In all the time that I knew him I never heard him complain of being tired, although he was one of the most industrious men I ever saw. His judicial acts were characterized by a high sense of honor, and his judgments were upright and of great worth."

Justice Woods was appointed to the supreme bench on the 21st of December, 1880, and shortly after this the bar of Atlanta gave a banquet in honor of the event. Upon that occasion he gave expression to sentiments which indicate the character of the man. Among other things he said:

"Since I have been upon the federal bench in this circuit I have kept one thing steadily in view, and that was to so administer the law as to encourage the sentiment that the courts of the United States were not courts of a foreign jurisdiction, but belonged to the people of the districts in which they were held, in common with all the people of the United States; not organized to oppress but to protect them in their rights, and mete out even handed justice to all. I hope to see this sentiment grow. I don't want the federal courts to be looked upon as engines of oppression, organized at Washington by an alien government, but courts to which the people may confidently turn for fairness, justice and the impartial administration of their own laws, both state and national, courts held by their own fellow-citizens for the benefit and protection of all the states of a common country."

An informal meeting of a few of the members of the Atlanta bar was held in Judge Newman's office, last evening, and the following call for a meeting of the entire city bar was issued:

"The members of the bar are requested to meet in the United States court room on Monday morning at 10 o'clock to take appropriate action touching the death of Justice W. B. Woods of the supreme court."

ONE MORE SABBATH

Is all That John W. Smith Will Enjoy in This World.

John W. Smith, the Heard county murderer, who is to be hung at Franklin, one week from next Friday, will remain in the Fulton county jail until the day before his execution, when he will be taken to the county seat of Heard county.

Smith is rapidly losing hope and is becoming quite restless. He watches the daily papers closely, and reads carefully everything that is said about him. He passes the greater part of his time reading the Bible and praying, and is pleasant with those who are about him. He is inclined to think that he has not been treated fairly and that he should not be hung. He is living in constant hope that he will be given a chance to end his life in the chaingang instead of upon the scaffold. Yesterday morning's CONSTITUTION, however, had a tendency to induce Smith to think that Governor Gordon might not interfere, and during the entire day he was extremely nervous. He does not like the manner in which the paper refers to him, and yesterday addressed the following notice to one of THE CONSTITUTION reporters:

FULTON COUNTY JAIL, May 14.—Dear Sir: Judging you are the author of the local in this morning's paper in reference to myself, also several other articles in previous editions in regard to me, I trust you will pardon me when I remind you I am in a serious fix, and hope that in future you will say something that will benefit me, and not with a great many others, kick the man that is down. I would be glad to see you again. Yours, etc.,

JOHN W. SMITH.

The note is written in a clear, bold hand, indicating that Smith is an expert with the pen.

Fun at a Picnic.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 14.—[Special.]—The bakers' union gave a picnic up the river today, and had a sure enough picnic. Heuser's corner is the toughest corner in Nashville, and a crowd hangs about that neighborhood which tries to keep up the reputation of the corner. The crowd all went to the picnic, and picked a quarrel with Charlie Kennon and his friend Raymer, two peaceable, quiet men. These took sticks, and between them and a half dozen of the Heuser corner crowd, followed a bloody battle, in which claret flowed from all freely, and Kennon and Raymer were badly cut and brought home in a skiff. Had not policemen interfered several men would have been killed. As it was, the Heuser crowd got badly done up before Kennon and Raymer were downed.

Another Ballot at Tallahassee.

TALLAHASSEE, May 14.—The vote for United States senator in the legislature today was as follows: Perry 26, Bloxham 25, Goodrich, republican 15, Scattering, democrat, 21.

Mormon Elders.

Joseph Young, son of Brigham Young, accompanied by another Mormon elder, passed through the city yesterday on their way to North Carolina where they go to preach Mormonism.

The California Pioneers.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The California pioneers of '49 and '50 formed a national association here today with General John C. Fremont as president.

DRY MONOPOLE WINS.

A GREAT DAY AT THE BROOKLYN JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

Over Twenty Thousand Persons Witness the Opening of the Spring Meeting—Dry Monopole's Owner Makes Sixty Thousand Dollars by Winning the Race—Reward Given, Etc.

NEW YORK, May 14.—The spring meeting of the Brooklyn jockey club opened today. The weather was bright and sunny. The attendance was very heavy, the crowd being rated at from fifteen to twenty thousand people. There was absolutely no betting, in view of the fact that the law permitting betting on the tracks is now before the governor awaiting his signature. The feature of the day was the Brooklyn handicap, fully half a million dollars being deposited on the result. It was won, after a grand race, by Monopole, the favorite; Blue Wing having to be content with the second place only a neck ahead of Hidalgo. The owner of the horse, Sam Emery, a well known bookmaker, is said to have won $60,000 on the race and made the jockey who won it, Andrew McCarthy, a present of $1,000. Free Knight and Quito fell at the start, and Caldwell, who rode the latter, was badly hurt.

First race, five-eighths of a mile, Bankrupt won, Pampero second, Ichi Ban third. Time 1:01½.

Second race, one mile, Buckstone won, Phil Lee second, Greenfield third. Time, 1:42½.

Third race, one half mile, Guarantee won, Kingfield second, Satisfaction third. Time, 50 seconds.

Fourth race, one and three-quarter miles. To a good start Exile was first to show, Alf Estelle second, Boaz third, and Himalaya fourth. Coming by the stand Fenelon had the lead of a length and Exile was in front of Dry Monopole by a neck, Himalaya fourth, Blue Wing fifth. Fenelon retained his length at the turn with Exile second, and Dry Monopole third. After passing the quarter, however, Exile began to fall back and Dry Monopole took the second place, with Blue Wing third. They ran as named to the head of the stretch, where Fenelon was beaten and Hidalgo joined the leaders. A desperate finish ensued, Dry Monople eventually winning by a neck, with Blue Wing second, a neck in front of Hidalgo. Time, 2:07.

Fifth race, one-half mile, Bonnie King won, Bendigo second, Satean third. Time, 51½.

A SURPRISE AT LOUISVILLE.

Florimore Wins a Race with Odds Against Her of 6 to 1

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 14.—The Kentucky oaks and the fourth race, one and one-eight mile dash for three-year-olds and upwards, were the features today. In the former Wary sold favorite, with Grisette thought of. Florimore, Wary's stable companion, won in 2:46¾. Surprising to relate the odds against her were 6 to 1. Wary ran second, while Grisette pulled up at the eighth pole out of the race.

Fosteral and Jim Nave ran a dead heat one and one-eighteenth mile dash, the latter's mount catching Withers napping at the wire, when he had his race won. The second time Fosteral won by a half length in 1:57¾, one-half second slower than at first.

First race, one half mile, Santaline won, Balance second, Little Virgil third. Time 51½.

Second race, one and a half miles, Florimore won, Wary second, Bar Nail third. Time 2:40¾.

Third race, one and a quarter miles, Montana Regent won, Irish Pat second, Poteen third. Time 4:13½.

Fourth race, one and a quarter miles, dead-heat between Fosteral and Jim Nave. Time 1:57½. Fosteral won the run off in 1:57½.

Fifth race, one mile, Fellow Broeck won, Wanderer second, Warrington third. Time 1:47½.

The Game in Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 14.—[Special.]—The game between Nashville and New Orleans today was too one sided to be interesting. Up to the sixth inning the visitors had not got a man past the first base, and but for Masran's wild throw to first, in this inning, they would have been shut out. Their runs were all made after this, the spoiling of what would have been a pretty double play and have retired the side. Burk's playing at short was the feature of the game. The visitors made numerous hits, but too scattering to avail them anything. Innings:

Nashville	0	2	0	5	2	0	2	4	0—15
New Orleans	0	0	0	0	0	4	0	0	0—4

Batteries—Nashville, Masran and Nicholas; New Orleans, Clark and Vaughn. Base hits—Nashville, 18; New Orleans, 13. Errors—Nashville, 3; New Orleans 13, of which Pujot made 7.

Three Consecutive Home Runs.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 14.—[Special.]—The third game between Memphis and Mobile was witnessed by a fair crowd this afternoon. The game was simply a walk-over for the locals. Andrews, of the Memphis team, made three consecutive home runs. This is the first instance of the kind in the baseball history of the country.

SCORE BY INNINGS.

Memphis	4	1	3	6	3	2	0	2	4—25
Mobile	0	0	0	3	0	1	2	0	0—6

To Play in Atlanta.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 14.—[Special.]—Manager Jack Sneed, of the crack Memphis club, concluded arrangements today for his team to play two exhibition games in Atlanta on May 20 and 21.

Games Elsewhere.

At Cincinnati—Cincinnati 7, Metropolitans 6.
At St. Louis—St. Louis 8, Baltimore 3.
At Pittsburg—Pittsburg 5, Indianapolis 2.
At Charleston—Charleston 21, Savannah 4. Eight innings. Darkness.
At Boston—Boston 10, Washington 2.
At New York—New York 2, Philadelphia 17.
At Louisville—Louisville 4; Athletic 5. Ten innings.

BALL TO BAT.

Memphis Will Bring Her Team to Atlanta, Followed by Nashville.

Atlantians will be treated to two games of baseball on Friday and Saturday next, Memphis, New Orleans and Nashville having determined to play two exhibition games at Athletic park.

For some time past, Sneed, manager of the Memphis team, has been writing Mr. Steve Ryan suggesting games between his club and Nashville or New Orleans at the end of the present series, when Nashville and Memphis leave home. Yesterday Mr. Ryan received a telegram from Manager Sneed asking about the ball park and requesting an immediate answer. Mr. Ryan telegraphed Sneed that the park was idle and that he could get it. Last night Sneed wired Mr. Ryan that his team, Nashville and New Orleans, would all pass through Atlanta next week going to Charleston, Savannah and Mobile, and that Memphis would play one of the clubs on Friday and the other on Saturday.

Nashville now leads the race with New Orleans second and Memphis third. Up to a few days ago New Orleans was in the lead. Savannah brings up the rear, and is closely pressed by Charleston and Mobile for the place. The clubs are all decidedly weaker this year than they have ever been before in the Southern league. Memphis has a team this year which is a little stronger than she had last year. Nashville's team is inferior to the one which represented the Tennessee capital in 1886. Charleston is slightly stronger than before while Savannah is not one particle stronger than the Birmingham pudding.

Nashville's brag pitcher is named Maul. He hits the ball well.

Moxie Williams, who did good work in the champions' right field last year, is playing shortstop for Charleston.

Brower, the man who walked off the moving train and climbed back again, is covering first base for Savannah.

Keppel, the boss third bagger of the league, is with Memphis.

Old men Phelan and Force are with Memphis this year.

Nashville is playing a Tennessee boy and he plays good ball.

Corcoran, Macon's third baseman, is doing the third base work for Charleston.

There are no Shaffers in the Southern league this year.

Monk Cline is in Rochester and has knocked the ball into Canada this season.

Purcell is playing right field for Baltimore in great shape.

Knouff can't pitch at all this season.

Cub Stricker is playing shortstop for Cleveland.

Conway and Gunson form one of Goldsby's batteries in the Topeka, Ks., team.

Chicago can't play a little bit this season.

THE BLACKWOOD RELEASE.

Sample Opinions of Persons Who Have Studied the Case.

The governor has as yet received no application for a requisition for F. A. Blackwood, the much-fought-over forger who is now under arrest in Aiken county, South Carolina.

It will be remembered that when Blackwood's application for a writ of habeas corpus was decided in his favor, instead of being turned loose, he was placed upon South Carolina soil, but, by a strange coincidence, right within reach of some South Carolina constables, who had warrants for his arrest. It was supposed that immediately after his arrest application for a requisition would be made by the Augusta authorities. But so far there are no evidences of any such action.

The decision of Judge Roney in this case seems to amuse a good many members of the profession in Atlanta. They say that the only question before the court was the legality of the arrest of the prisoner, and that that question could not have been made by the prisoner. That has been the universal decision. So Judge Roney must have released the prisoner because he found that his arrest was illegal and that the sovereign—that is the state of South Carolina—was demanding his release. There is no law on the face of the earth to sustain him in this position. It is not comity nor extradition nor anything else. But the most amusing fact connected with the whole affair was that Blackwood was not released. If entitled to his liberty he ought to have walked out of the courthouse a free man. But it seems that while declaring that he ought to be released, the judge did not release him but instead put him in custody of the sheriff to carry him back to South Carolina. The sheriff didn't take him back to South Carolina, but carried him down below Augusta to Sand Bar Ferry, and put him in a boat and carried him over to the South Carolina coast on Beach island, where two South Carolina officers stood ready to arrest him.

"Who sent them to that particular point on the river?" asked a prominent attorney who was discussing the question yesterday. "Who sent the sheriff with his prisoner several miles down the river when there was a broade bridg by which they could have crossed to Carolina? Where did Judge Roney find his authority for releasing a prisoner on habeas corpus and still holding him in custody? Who sent the sheriff down the river? All this may be very adroit management, but it isn't law. Such a decision will be ridiculed on both sides of the river."

This is a sample of the queries put by different members of the bar when discussing the Blackwood matter. The preponderance of opinion seems to be that Judge Roney's decision is not good law, but while they criticise his decision, all join in paying the highest tribute to his character as a man and in expressing the belief that he has acted conscientiously throughout.

WORK TO COMMENCE AT ONCE.

Contracts Given Out for the Racing Track.

President Kingsberry, of the Driving club, has closed the contract for the racing track, and work will begin on the same on Monday morning. The contract has been let to Mr. Squire, of Montgomery, Ala., who has the contract for grading at the barracks, and who has made a good record there. Mr. Squire's idea is to put on a force of two hundred men at once and build the track in sixty days. President Kingsberry has also closed a contract with Mr. Smith to start work with a force of fifty men Monday morning, clearing up the park, cutting the dead wood, removing the brush and putting the handsome forests in shape.

PLANS FOR THE BUILDING ACCEPTED.

Mr. C. D. Horn and Mr. J. C. Peck, directors in charge, submitted last night handsome plans for the main building, with specifications from G. L. Normann, architect. The building will be 504 feet in length, 116 feet in width, two stories high. It is a very handsome building, and will be much handsomer than the cotton exposition building, and counting the second story galleries will have more floor space. Mr. Normann is to co[illegible] work on plans for the other buildings, th[illegible] stand, the club house and ornamental gat[illegible] plans will be submitted next Saturday, a[illegible] cepted by the board will be contracted [illegible] Mr. Peck, who is in charge, sta[illegible] he has already given the cont[illegible] lumber for the main building and will b[illegible] on that building this week, and that it ca[illegible] pleted in eighty days.

The committees last night reported [illegible] thousand dollars additional subscription [illegible] thousand dollars more is needed to make [illegible] success.

TWO BONDS ASSESSED.

Jim Phillips, the Hackman, Gives a [illegible] Bond—Ella Dovers Goes to Jail.

Jim Phillips, the negro hackman wh[illegible] Coroner Haynes to inquests, was arraig[illegible]lice court yesterday morning and asked to [illegible] plea to a charge of disorderly conduct. Ella Dovers, a 13-year-old white girl, was arraigned on the same charge. The evidence against both defendants was sufficient to sustain the charge, and Judge Anderson required Phillips to give a thousand dollar bond for his appearance at the city court, and required the girl to give a hundred dollar bond to the same court. Phillips has been driving a street hack in Atlanta for several years, and has acquired some property. He gave the bond readily. The girl was unable to give the bond and was committed to jail. Ella Dovers is one of the girls Etta Henderson, the Savannah quadroon, had induced to accompany her to Savannah.

A Sudden Death.

Mrs. Clara Reese died very suddenly yesterday afternoon at her home on Elliot street. Mrs. Reese had been quite sick, but during the past few days appeared to be improving nicely. Early yesterday morning she was so much improved that she was permitted to sit up in the bed a short time. Soon in the afternoon, however, she began complaining of a heavy, dull pain about her heart and about four o'clock breathed her last. When the lady died her husband was sitting beside the bed holding her hand in his little dreaming that death was so near. Mrs. Reese leave besides her husband two children, one only a few days old. The funeral will take place this afternoon at three o'clock from the residence on Elliott street.

The Ticket Takers' Picnic.

The grand picnic by the Atlanta division of railway conductors next Thursday at Spring Bank will be largely attended. The committee of arrangements is doing everything in its power to make the occasion the grandest in the history of Georgia picnics. A special train long enough for all who want to go will leave the union passenger depot at 7 o'clock in the morning. At Spring Bank the Atlantians will be met by excursionists from Chattanooga, Nashville, Memphis and other places. Hon. C. S. Wheaton, grand conductor of the order, will be present. Four brass bands will be on the ground and the biggest dancing platform ever erected in Georgia will be at the disposal of the picnickers.

Two Small Fires.

The fire department had two short runs yesterday. The first one was in the afternoon about 3 o'clock. An alarm was rung in from box 41, junction Peactree and Decatur, and was caused by an incipient fire at No. 12, a residence on Wheat street. A defective flue caused the roof of the ell to catch fire. Prompt work prevented the building from being destroyed. The damage was small. About ten last night the second alarm was sent in from box 52, corner Decatur and Ivy, and called out the department. The fire was found in the alley way in the rear of the Western Union telegraph office. A pile of old barrels had been set fire by some one, and quite a blaze had sprung up when the department reached the building. No damage was done.

Io, the Poor Indian!

Mrs. A. S. Quinton, vice-president of the Woman's National Indian association, is in the city. She designs organizing an Atlanta branch of this association, and will, tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, deliver an address in the First Methodist church. On this occasion she will give a full and clear statement of the objects and work of the society. Mrs. Quinton is a noble woman who has striven earnestly to ameliorate the condition of the benighted American Indians, and she is anxious to enlist the services of the women of Atlanta in the work to which she is devoting her life. Doubtless she will be greeted by a large crowd tomorrow afternoon. She comes to Atlanta recommended by some of the best people in the United States.

A Broken Leg.

Fanny Marlaw, a negro woman, whose home is on Jenkins street, broke her left leg yesterday afternoon by stepping into a sewer eye on Decatur street. The woman was standing on the edge of the sidewalk near the corner of Decatur and Bell streets, and stepping backward off the sidewalk, got her left foot into the sewer. In the fall which ensued the limb was broken near the knee. She was taken to her home, where Dr. Green rendered the necessary surgical attention.

Hit With a Stone.

Chief of Police Connolly was yesterday notified by Mr. J. M. Arrowood, the attorney, that three small boys had been seen stoning Blackstock, the man who was found dead near Colonel Hulsey's. Mr. Arrowood believed that Blackstock's death was due to a lick by one of the boys.

Bob Stearnes Better.

Bob Stearnes, who was so severely stabbed by Deputy Marshal Melton at a house on Elliott street, is still improving. He rested well all day yesterday and up to midnight last night. His attending physician thinks his recovery will now be [illegible]

SATURDAY IN MACON.

VARIOUS NEWS ITEMS AND COMMENTS.

First Baptist Church—The Work of the Evangelists—The Drowned Boy—A Novel Invention—Taller's Body Unrecovered—Other News Notes and Personal Paragraphs.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—On Monday next Rev. J. B. Shockley will remove with his gospel tent to Milledgeville, where the evangelists go by special request to conduct a series of meetings.

These people have labored faithfully in Macon for several weeks, and have accomplished a great deal. The services have been well attended, and many attracted to the tent by the novelty of the matter, have been brought into the church under the convicting eloquence of these Christian people.

Their work is not characterized by the show and parade of the Salvation Army, but everything has been conducted most orderly. The people of Macon wish them God speed in their work of love.

A RUNAWAY HORSE

Causes the Death of One Boy and Injures Others.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—This afternoon about four o'clock, a horse owned by a man named King, of Jones county, took fright on Cotton avenue, and dashing round the city hall, tore loose from the buggy and narrowly missed running over a boy. Down Poplar street he flew, cutting across Third street. He ran on to the pavement at S. S. Dunlap's, and the end of the single tree, attached by one trace, flew around and struck Fred Otto, the nine-year old son of the jeweler, knocking him fifteen feet, and throwing him violently to the hard sidewalk. Mr. Hillyer ran and picked the boy up, and found him insensible, with the blood flowing freely from a ghastly wound near the base of the brain. Dr. Gibson was hastily summoned, and the boy was removed to his father's home on New street. The doctor dressed the wound, finding a fracture of the skull. The little fellow remained unconscious, and it is reported that he is dead tonight. The horse ran down Third street, slipped and fell at Machold's corner, arose and ran to P. W. Holt's corner, where he was caught by Officer Adams. He was badly cut on the leg. Quite a number of narrow escapes occurred during his wild flight.

The remains of Stationhouse Keeper Henry's little daughter were buried at Rose Hill today.

Judge Simmons, in chambers, today began a hearing of the motion for a new trial brought by Judge Giles, of Perry, in the case of Mattie Batron, convicted of voluntary manslaughter, and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary last term of court. The conclusion was postponed for two weeks.

Today a freight train on the Atlanta division ran off near Pio Nono, and the passenger trains had to transfer, which caused considerable delay.

THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

To be Dedicated by Dr. Warren, the Pastor, Tomorrow.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Your cor[illegible]t paid a visit to First Baptist church [illegible] listened to Mr. Arthur Wood per[illegible] the great organ. The church is to be d[illegible] by Dr. Warren, the pastor, tomorrow, a[illegible]arge edifice will be packed with one o[illegible]est audiences ever assembled in Ma[illegible] interior of the grand auditorium is [illegible]us work of art, and the thirty-five th[illegible] dollars expended on the church ha[illegible] al[illegible]pent to a noble purpose. The fres[illegible]g and stained glass lights in the r[illegible]bined with the beautifully tinted w[illegible]duce an effect wonderfully harmo[illegible] [illegible]an is one of the finest instruments in[illegible]ntry, and under the skilled hand of [illegible]anist, sends out a volume of melody in[illegible]bly beautiful.

The grounds adjacent to the church are being laid off in flower beds, walks and grass plats, filled with rare plants, and the entire building and surroundings attest the skill, good taste and judgment of the architects and builders.

HATCHER'S WAGON.

A Novel Invention by a Macon Man--A Company to Organize.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—A CONSTITUTION reporter was driven out to Collins's wagon factory today by Mr. J. M. Hatcher to have a look at his new wagon. The novelty of this consists in its being a wrought iron wagon with no bolts and taps, and no woodwork about it. The axles and pole are hollow iron pipes, and the spindles are inserted in the axles and kept in position by set screws. The bolsters and bounds are made of single bars of wrought iron, which may be made on farms like plows. For cheapness, durability and strength, with lightness, this invention is unequalled by any patent your correspondent ever saw. Mr. Hatcher will organize a stock company and manufacture wagons on a large scale. The spindles are made reversible, and when one end wears out the other is used. Mr. Dillon, foreman of the shops, and other men skilled in such matters, pronounce the wagon a first class bonanza.

THE ATHENÆUM.

An Elegant Programme Well Carried Out Last Night.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—The following was the programme of the Athenæum on the evening of May 13, at Mr. Charles Canning's:

5. Song..........Mrs. J. E. Wells

The programme was well carried out, and it was one of the most elegant of the season's entertainments.

INTERESTING CORRESPONDENCE

Between the Poultry Association and the Hotel Lanier.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Following is some interesting correspondence that was overlooked in making up the returns of the governor's visit to Macon. It is needless to remark that the enterprise displayed by the gentlemen of the association was fully appreciated by Manager Crawford, of the Hotel Lanier, and heartily enjoyed by his excellency, the governor.

MACON, Ga., May 11, 1887.—Captain J. L. Hardeman, President Georgia Poultry and Bench Association, Macon. Dear Sir: I beg to tender through you to the proprietors of the Hotel Lanier a basket of fresh eggs, laid today, for the breakfast of the governor and his staff. Very respectfully, R. D. LOCKE.

MACON, Ga., May 11th, 1887.—Proprietors Hotel Lanier, Macon—Dear Sirs: Will you please accept this basket of fresh eggs, laid today, by the hens of Colonel R. D. Locke, for the breakfast of the governor and his staff. Respectfully yours,

J. L. HARDEMAN,
Pres. Ga. Poultry and Bench Association.

Fire in a Woodpile.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Today a fire caught in a woodpile at Bostick, near the eighty-four mile post on the Columbus road, and burned 150 cords of wood and 150 feet of railroad track, delaying the Columbus train four hours.

Officer Wagnon was called to kill a mad dog at Hollis's stables tonight, which he did after some difficulty.

The Musical Contest Next Week.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—A gentleman suggested that as Atlanta has so often crossed swords with Macon in friendly rivalry, and has more than once given the people of Macon something to think of, she should show her colors at the musical contest Thurs[illegible] Friday nights. Macon has felt the pulse of Atlanta in Olympian sports; now she wishes to meet her foeman in the department of æsthetics. Atlanta must show Georgia that she can tickle the ivory as well as she can knock the base ball. Yesterday's CONSTITUTION gave particulars concerning this musical contest. Atlanta must be heard from.

TALLER'S BODY UNRECOVERED.

The Fruitless Search for the Body of the Drowned Youth.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Although diligent search has been made for the body of young Taller, who was drowned in the Ocmulgee river yesterday, it has not been recovered up to 4 o'clock this afternoon. The death is a peculiarly sad one. The lad was converted at the evangelist meetings only a few days ago, and his life bade fair to be a useful one. He was not a member of Centennary Sunday-school, but was there yesterday, while the school was enjoying their annual picnic. Still further efforts will be made to recover the body, but it is feared it will not be found until it rises from decomposition.

A QUEER GROWTH.

A Spear of Nut Grass Grows Through an Onion.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Mr. Tap Holt showed your correspondent a queer freak from his garden this morning. An onion an inch and a half in diameter, has been pierced by a blade of nut grass, which has a nut on the lower end, and after growing through the onion shows the green blades above. It is a very remarkable freak, and shows the persistency of the nut grass in a characteristic manner.

DOTS AND DASHES.

Some Spicy Specials Served in Short Sentences.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Mr. Howard Cutter is improving Cutter's green, East Macon, by terracing and sodding the bluffs, and it will be most lovely when finished.

A good shower fell in East Macon last night, but did not reach the west side of the river to much extent.

Miss Olivia Cobb, of Athens, daughter of Lamar Cobb, is visiting the family of Dr. R. M. Patterson, this city.

The sale of lots on the Enterprise syndicate is down for the 23d of May, when the boys will enjoy a day of feasting and rejoicing out there.

THE MILLEDGEVILLE BOYS

Greeted by the Smiles of the Fair, and Crowned with Laurel.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—The ovation given the college cadets on their return from Macon, was one of the most enthusiastic affairs seen here since Georgia seceded. When the train rolled up to the depot Friday morning, a large crowd had gathered there to welcome and escort them to the city. The stores had closed, and everybody was bent on returning some of the honor the boys had won for our college and city. Amid the ringing of bells, the boom of cannon, and the shouts of the jubilant people, the young heroes led by two brass bands, marched to the city. On arrival at the gate to the college square they were presented a beautiful scene. On each side of the walk from the gate to the college, lines of young ladies, waving handkerchiefs and flags, threw floral offerings before them as the champions moved on in victory. On the grounds in front of the college a large crowd were awaiting to add to the honors already given them. As they marched up and came to a halt the prettiest part of the ceremony was witnessed. The young ladies came out with beautiful floral offerings, and in a short time every member of the company was covered with flowers. General D. H. Hill made an eloquent and eulogistic speech congratulating the young men on their success. The citizens will give them a magnificent banquet next week. The ladies of the college treated them royally Friday night at their banquet. Captain K. G. Matheson, to whom the honors of success are due, is a young man, but one of the best officers in the country. Nearly $300 was raised yesterday by the citizens, and after the amount is made a little more, a magnificent present will be tendered him as a token of Milledgeville's high regard for him as a soldier and a citizen.

THE COUCH-BURDETTE TRAGEDY.

The Murdered Man Buried—The Living Victim.

SENOIA, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—L. W. Couch, the man murdered in the tragedy of Wednesday afternoon was buried Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. T. M. Burdette, the other principal in the difficulty, is still lying in a critical condition. The physicians on investigation find that the bullet which struck below the left nipple went through the breast bone and ranged around the chest. The first bullet went through the fleshy part of the body above the hip and imbedded itself crosswise in the right window shutter of Shepherd's store. The third shot struck the north side of the store, and the fourth shot struck the window shutter of the storehouse occupied by Mr. T. E. Atkinson, which is fifty yards in a diagonal line southwest from the scene of the difficulty, and on the opposite side of the street. The pistol was a thirty-eight calibre and a self-cocker. It is thought that as he reeled from the sidewalk after the stroke had been given, that the muscles of his hand continued to contract in obedience to the impression of his mind at the time of the fatal stroke, and in this way the two last shots were fired at random. It is the general impression that Burdette acted entirely on the defensive.

TOCCOA'S PLEASURE-SEEKERS.

The Union Sabbath School Spends a Day in the Woods.

TOCCOA, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Yesterday was the day selected for a union Sabbath-school picnic to be had about one mile from here, near Henderson falls. At 10 o'clock the schools met at their respective churches and marched to the picnic grounds. Each school wore badges of different colors—the Baptist being white and the words: "Toccoa Baptist Sunday-school, May 13, 1887;" the Methodist pink and the words were: "Toccoa Methodist Sunday-school, May 13, 1887," while the Presbyterians were blue and had the single word "Presbyterian." By 11 o'clock a large crowd was present. At 12 o'clock "Sweet Bye-and-Bye" was sung. Prayer by Rev. B. F. Frazier. Address by Mr. James W. Harris, and last but not least came dinner. Two tables, each about thirty feet long, were just loaded with good things, to which the crowd did ample justice.

The Arrest of a Deputy Sheriff.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Deputy Collector A. W. Fite, Deputy Marshal M. W. Scott and Ira C. Campbell seized this evening, about one hundred yards from the corporate limits of Cartersville, two mules and a wagon and about 75 gallons of corn whisky, and arrested Samuel Mosely, deputy sheriff of Pickens county, and Samuel Bozeman and a negro named Willis McKinny. The parties have given preliminary bonds and will be tried before Commissioner Collins Monday. They are said to be old violators of the revenue law, and the people are rejoiced that the seizure and arrests have been made.

Cotton Compress Charges.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Some of the cotton exporters on Bay street are indignant over the anticipated increase in compressing charges for next season. The matter was finally settled this morning. The rate for the past season was 35 cents a bale. Next year the charge will be 65 cents for cotton for export and 50 cents for coastwise. A gentleman who is interested in the compresses stated this morning that the companies are merely going back to the old charges. Last year the rate was lowered to 35 cents at the request of the Central railroad.

An Improvement for Gainesville.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Mr. Daniel M. Stringer is preparing to roll his wooden building, which is located on the northeast corner of the Public square, back to make place for a handsome brick business house, 70x100 feet, with an opera house in the second story. When this house is removed and a new one placed on the spot, the entire Public square will be surrounded with brick and mortar. Gainesville is growing fast and it takes no prophetic eye to see her greatness in the near future.

MISS HARDEN'S DEATH

THE ORIGINAL SWEETHEART OF JOHN HOWARD PAYNE.

The Story of a Romantic Life—The Possessor of the Original Copy of "Home, Sweet Home," the Lines of Which Are Interlined With Protestations of Love, Etc., Etc.

ATHENS, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—In her modest home on Hancock avenue, Miss Mary Harden, long a resident of Athens, died tonight.

For several days she has been failing rapidly, and the watchers at her bedside knew early this morning that her life on earth was rapidly drawing near its close. Miss Harden has been living for many years a secluded life, rarely passing beyond the threshold of her own domicile. Indeed, there are many citizens living here who have never seen Miss Harden, so secluded has her life been. Years ago she was a young and attractive maiden, in all the glory and freshness of beautiful young womanhood. At that time she met John Howard Payne, the author of "Home Sweet Home," and the charms of her person and mind attracted strongly the fancy of Payne. He grew to worship, and finally to idolize her, and time and again offered her his hand and his heart. She liked him not well enough, perhaps, to wed him, but her friendship for him was sufficiently strong to cause her to treasure his memory, and preserve with almost religious reverence the few moments of her former and long since dead lover. She has in her possession the original manuscript of that touching ballad, "Home, Sweet Home," which Payne wrote. Frequently has she been importuned by autograph hunters and speculators to part with this document. One gentleman, the agent of a well known magazine, offered her three hundred dollars for the manuscript, but she refused him, saying:

"I have been offered many times three hundred dollars for it."

It is said here by some who have seen the original that the manuscript is interlined with love messages and other tokens of affection in Payne's hand writing, and the fact that these tokens of a once living and breathing love will be put before the public, deterred her from ever parting with it. It is not known by any one what disposition she will make of this document. It is even hinted that she has destroyed it, fearing in case of her death that it might fall into other than friendly hands, and a love that was once sacred and tender to her become a sport and a jest with the world. But the general opinion is that she will have it buried with her.

Miss Harden was a lady of advanced age, the exact number of her years not being known. Her father, the late General Harden, was at one time a very wealthy man in this section, but after the war most of his fortune was swept away. When he died his daughter applied herself to the task of recovering most of the property, and notwithstanding fearful odds, succeeded in getting back much of it. She had been splendidly educated, and her natural talents were great and varied. An accomplished linguist she wrote and spoke several languages, especially being proficient in French, which she pronounced with the ease and correctness of an educated Parisian. For many years she was in the employ of well known publishing houses in the north, her work being translating the works of French authors into English. She not only maintained herself by this work, but was successful in laying aside each year a snug sum, which was applied to the object she ever had in view, regaining possession of the property of her father. It is said that she was in the employ of the French legation in this country for several years, long ago, her services being required in putting the necessary state documents pertaining to the work of the legation into French.

It is not known how much her estate will be worth. It has been considerably reduced. At one time it was large, but now the largest estimates do not place it beyond twenty-five thousand dollars. It is not known whether she left a will, as there has been no opportunity as yet of making an examination of her effects, but the rumor is abroad that she has made Emmanuel Episcopal church, of this city, her sole heir. The congregation of that parish has been particularly kind to her, nursing and comforting her in her last sickness, and it may be that the rumor is based upon some remarks of the sick woman, showing her gratitude to those who were kind to her when the clouds were closing about her life. She will probably be buried tomorrow in Oconee cemetery, though no official announcement of the funeral has yet been made public.

BASEBALL IN ATHENS.

The University Nine Again Defeats the Augustas.

ATHENS, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—The second game of ball between the Augusta and University nines took place at the fair grounds this morning. Quite a crowd was in attendance, and a much better game was played than the one of yesterday. The crack batteries were not put up, and the result was a victory for the Augusta boys by a score of nine to seven. The feature of the morning game was the unmerciful guying of the umpire by the whole crowd. The game this afternoon between the same nines was the deciding game, each side beginning with one victory on its side. The batteries were the same as those of yesterday, Morris and Williford acting for the University, and Stone and Dorsey occupying the box for Augusta. A fair crowd was in attendance, and the interest and enthusiasm was great. Notwithstanding the fact that the Augusta team had been strengthened by the addition of some excellent local players from Athens, the University again gave them a second severe drubbing. The defeat was almost as bad as that of yesterday, the score being 23 to 4 in favor of the university. This is the third time that crack ball teams from Augusta have been defeated by Athens nines. The opinion is general now that Augusta hereafter will not be so easily eager to accept challenges. Her team will no doubt confine work to Augusta and the immediate vicinity.

Baseball Breaks Up a Literary Exercise.

ATHENS, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—The Demosthenian society has offered a gold medal to the best debater in the society. The contest was to have taken place today, but the baseball games drew nearly the entire college to the fair grounds, and a quorum could not be secured. Much interest is manifested in the debate, and when it comes off no doubt a large crowd will be present. The enthusiastic members of the society were disgusted with the fact that a baseball game virtually broke up a literary contest where a gold medal was at stake.

Picnic Day in Athens.

ATHENS, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Today has been a regular picnic day in Athens. The Lucy Cobb decided to hold their delayed frolic today, and chose Sayre mills, on Sandy creek, as the place.

The Sunday-school of the First Methodist church went out to Princeton factory on the middle Oconee river, to spend the day.

Quite a party of grown people accompanied their hostess, Mrs. Crawford, to Lexington, in Oglethorpe county, where the day was spent in the pursuit of the usual picnic pleasure.

Died in Jail.

LUMPKIN, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—S. P. Jenkins, the man who knifed J. M. Glover, and was shot by Glover and Miller some time ago, has died in jail. He was indicted by the last grand jury for that offense, for carrying concealed weapons, and shooting at another. He was placed under a bond of $650, which being unable to give he was remanded to jail. He stayed only a few days and died of dysintery.

Tompkins is Killed.

TENNILLE, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Fayt Johnson and Frank Tompkins, two negro hands employed on Wrightsville railroad service train quarrelled. Johnson struck Tompkins with a shovel, from which he died today. Johnson is in jail at Sandersville. He claims that he was only playing, and had no hard feelings against Tompkins.

A QUIET GEORGIA HOME.

Interesting Sketch of the Home of Mr. W. W. King.

BARNESVILLE, Ga., May 14.—[Special Letter.]—A brief sketch of a quiet home, far away from the strifes and storms of trade-life, may be of interest to some. Very many years ago, in 1803, I think it was, a young man left the colder clime of the north and came south in search of health; of money he had plenty, but there was a dread in his mind that his malady might prove consumption, and if so, he must fold his arms to wait for the sure coming of his only relief—death. Stopping for rest he found himself upon the banks of a beautiful river, near a hospitable home whose inmates received the stranger within their gates. The sequel was that a fair daughter of the household became the wife of the stranger, and thus the north and south became united in the long ago. From this union of the Forts and Kings has sprung a noble race of people who have adorned the walks of social life and given lustre to the statesmanship of our country. For many years, one of them—Thomas Butler King—represented the Savannah district in congress. The Forts of Americus are also descendants of the same line.

Leaving the train at Atkinson, on the B. and W. railroad, one sees nothing to interest, but much to condemn. On every side, far as the human eye can reach, stretches away the vast extent of pine forest, once beautiful in symmetry and verdant in foliage, but now these magnificent trees are scarred unto death. As the forest dies away, nature with her lavish hand is covering the earth with a splendid growth of grass, and ere long this may become a fine grazing country.

For five miles through this wilderness of pine and sand we rode filled with the reflection that in other countries the forests are being protected and preserved as a sure source of future wealth, whilst in our own favored land they are being slain by the thousand acres. Suddenly a magnificent avenue of live oak trees arrests our attention, and we know at once that here at least the arm of vandalism has been arrested and its rude ravages stopped. The magnificent boughs meet over the broad road, and up the long way it looks like an arch fashioned for the triumphal entrance of some magnificent pageant.

Most of these trees look a hundred years old, requiring three men with outstretched arms to girdle them. At the end of this avenue and in the center of a square of splendid trees stands the mansion of which I write. To see it, one would not think it so ancient, for its huge thick walls are perfectly preserved, and it has the appearance of eternal durability. At the gate we were met by Mr. W. W. King, our host, who is a worthy representative of the fourth generation of this noble race of people. In the yard, and on every hand, the magnolia grows in perfect beauty, surrounded by live-oaks heavily draped with moss veils. Back of the house and down a bluff of eighty feet is the Satilla river, a beautiful stream of clearest water. It was to this river we had come to try our skill in the art piscatorial. Some one has written, "See Naples and die;" but we write, go to the Satilla and live. I have read numerous descriptions of fishing waters and many of our people go away from their own state to enjoy the fascinating sport; but no where on this earth can there be more exciting pleasure than right here on this splendid river. We shall not write the number of magnificent bream caught with hand pole in a single day lest we be charged with overdrawing in matters appertaining to fish.

We sent you a nice box that was but a sample of one day's work. It is an easy matter for an industrious fisherman to string a hundred pounds of the best fish in a day. With a careful oarsman to guide you along the banks in the early morning, standing upright in the bow of the boat with the bright "bob" dancing in the waters; then to see the waters break swiftly from the bank and suddenly feel the delightful plunges of a magnificent trout, that to me is rapture transporting—reader, have you never felt it?

Mr. King informs me that fishing in the fall and winter is as good, if not better, than at this season of the year. Just two miles down the river is Linda, the home of Jas. F. King. Charming as is the place of which I have just written, this is indeed the ideal place. Here culture of a rare order exists, an air of refinement pervades the entire place. Here with his family, a wife, daughter and son, this splendid type of the southern gentleman lives in an elegant home upon the banks of the Satilla, whose rippling music mingles with the sadder sounds of the ocean's wave. Mr. Hilliard, in his well written novel, makes DeVain to say of the school room where his lady love spends her hours and around which the flowers bloom in perfect beauty, enriched by the touch of her fairy fingers, "it seemed as if an angel in passing had shaken his wings, leaving a heavenly atmosphere." On every hand appears the life-giving touch of this sunbeam of the house, the only daughter, the child of their old age. Intelligent, graceful and good, she ennobles every presence and one feels purer and better for having met her.

I was telling Mr. King of Davis's triumphal tour through Georgia, how, as the train bearing him sped along, the women would come to their doors and hold up their babies that possibly the grand old chieftain might bestow a passing look upon them and bless them. Tears gathered in the old man's eyes. He had read it, but he loved to hear it again, for his love for Davis is unbounded. Said he: "I am glad our people gave expression to their real sentiment. Of all men of whom I know anything in life or in history I regard Jeff Davis as facile princeps, the purest and grand est of them all."

These people were rice planters before the war and this you know meant princely fortune and income. Just twenty miles down the river, at tide water, they still own a large plantation which they visit in a day and return to Linda at night, away from malaria.

I could write volumes of this home and its surroundings, and not gratify my pen that urges me on. If you are in search of sport such as I have written, go there once and you will return again.

Then when you shall have seen what we have seen and felt what we have felt, you will know that we have not written a dream but an abstract reality. H. R. H., JR.

Wrightsville's Revival Meeting.

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—A series of meetings are now in progress at the Methodist church here, which are being conducted successfully by Rev. E. A. Sanders, the pastor, and Rev. H. T. Smith, pastor of the Baptist church, is rendering him valuable assistance in the services. A considerable revival is expected.

Instantly Killed.

WAYCROSS, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Joe Jackson, a colored man employed as night watchman at the Savannah, Florida and Western yards, in attempting to cross the track was tripped up and instantly killed by the switch engine, last night. No blame can be attached to the company.

Probably Fatally Injured.

EASTMAN, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—Sam Smith jumped off the Amoskeag railroad train while in motion, fell, and the car wheels ran over him and broke both arms and otherwise injured him, it is thought, fatally.

Sign of Insanity.

A young man about 23 years old, named John Key, has lately been showing unmistakable signs of lunacy. Yesterday his mental aberration assumed a dangerous form and he tried to strike members of his family. Tomorrow or Tuesday he will be taken before Ordinary Calhoun for examination.

Selling Homes.

Samuel W. Goode & Co., the real estate agents, yesterday sold four pieces of property at public sale, and each sale was well attended. The first sale occurred at 341 Mangum street, where a four-room cottage was purchased by Mr. Charles Tyler for $650. A small lot, 50x97 feet, on Bush street, was purchased by James Bell for $430. The biggest sale was on Smith street, a seven-room house on a lot 56x155 feet being sold to William Mims for $3,150.

AGREES TO PAY TEN THOUSAND.

A Strong Fight for Damages Against a Railroad.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 14.—[Special.]—The case of Daniel Swint, administrator, against the Central railroad, has been settled, the company having agreed to pay the plaintiff $10,000 and all costs.

Swint was the administrator of W. T. Lambert, an engineer on the Montgomery and Eufaula railroad. He was killed in an accident about four years ago, a few miles west of Eufaula. Suit was brought on the ground that the company had not kept its track in proper condition, and that the elevation of the outer rail on the curve, where the accident occurred, was too great. The case was removed to Savannah. On the first trial the jury gave the plaintiff a verdict of $10,000. The railroad company moved for a new trial, and the plaintiff carried the case to the supreme court. After being heard there, the case was remanded to the superior court of Chatham county for retrial. At the last December term the suit came on for a second trial, and the jury gave a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $181.72. The railroad asked to have the verdict set aside on the ground that the damages were excessive. Judge Adams granted the motion, and the plaintiff was about to carry the case to the supreme court again, when a proposition was made to settle it. Colonel Rufus E. Lester and Messrs. Brewster and Fort represented the plaintiff, and General Lawton and General George P. Harrison, Jr., of Opelika, represented the company.

Died in the Woods.

From the Monroe, Ga., Advertiser.

On Tuesday morning last information that a negro man had been found dead in the woods near the public road, about two miles from Forsyth, reached Coroner Britt, who, with a jury, proceeded to the place and held an inquest. The evidence developed the fact that the dead negro was a stranger in the community, that he was first seen Sunday evening near where he died, that he claimed to be named Jackson and hailed from near Barnesville, that he appeared to be sick: that he was seen again on Monday morning and fed, that he was last seen alive about 9 o'clock Monday night. The jury of inquest returned the following verdict: "We find that the said Jackson came to his death on the night of the 2d day of May, 1887, from natural causes unknown to this jury."

A Self-Revolving Dip Net.

From the Hawkinsville, Ga., Dispatch.

A very remarkable invention or discovery has been made by Mr. Joe Reynolds, of Hawkinsville. He has now at work in the river at this place a self revolving dip net, and it not only dips up the fish, but puts them in a basket suspended under the net. The net revolves day and night, and occasionally a fine red-horse, or bream, or shad, or other fish, is dipped out of the stream, and slides gently into the basket.

Mr. Reynolds caught sixty dollars worth of fish from the 12th of March to the 16th of April. His machine works itself without a cent of expense. A few mornings ago he went to the net and found that it had caught during the night and dropped into the basket six red-horse, five white shad, four river carp and a cat fish.

Suicide of an Alligator.

From the Lumpkin, Ga., Independent.

One day last week a negro man, while fishing in the Hodchodkee creek, caught an alligator six feet long on his set lines. The alligator got the large line twisted around his throat and was nearly choked to death when the fisherman caught him. Whether his death was accidental or a premeditated suicide is hard to determine. The negro held a post mortem examination and found the usual lightwood knot in the 'gater's fish basket. He sold the hide and secured seven pounds of alligator steak for his Sunday dinner.

Tumbled to the Racket.

From the Covington, Ga., Enterprise.

A lively soiree came off on the bridge at Cedar Shoals one evening last week. 'Twas pleasant affair and greatly enjoyed by the eight couples who participated therein. We are not much on the dance, but to be honest, we would be happy to shake our rheumatic limbs once more in an old fashion hop with a gay and active partner who "tumbled to the racket" every time the live "caller" shouted, "Swing your partners and promenade all." Now, wouldn't that be nice?

Tobacco Culture in Gilmer.

From the Ellijay Courier.

Mr. J. B. Debord relates to us his experience in raising tobacco. He planted an acre and raised 940 pounds, which netted him $72. This report of the business is indeed encouraging to those who have embarked in this business. A clear profit of $72 over and above expenses is a remarkable attainment for a farmer in this country. Mr. Debord's experience may profit those engaging in this lately developed branch of agriculture in this region.

Impossible for Him to Serve.

Among the gentlemen recently appointed by Governor Gordon to serve as visitors to the State university and Atlanta univeriity was Professor C. B. Chapman, the brilliant young principal of the Macon high schools. Yesterday he wrote the governor thanking him for the appointment, but stating that it would be impossible for him to serve because of the fact that the examinations at his own schools came at the same time as the visits to the state institutions.

An Infallible Sign.

From the Bluffton, Ga., Springs.

A few days since when a certain citizen carried home a bottle of patent medicine and proceeded to take a dose, a little six-year-old wanted to know if it was whisky. When asked her reason for asking such a strange question, she replied that she 'didn't think papa would be drinking it if it was anything else.' She knew his failing. Such incidents furnish cause for sad reflection.

Old, But Industrious.

From the Oconee, Ga., Enterprise.

Mrs. L. W. Branch, who lives in our town is now eighty-seven years old and is quite lively and industrious yet. She came to town to live with Mrs. O. F. Johnson on the 28th day of December last, and up to this date she has knit seven pairs of gloves, ten pairs of socks and eleven pairs of stockings. She leaves for Atlanta in a few days to visit her daughter, Mrs. Dr. Richardson.

The "Angel" will Accompany Him.

From the Franklin, Ga., News.

The editor and angel will leave Monday for Atlanta. They will spend a day in that city, when they will leave for Valdosta via Savannah, to attend the annual meeting of the Georgia Press association. They will excursion thence to Fernandina, Fla., by way of Brunswick, Cumberland island and other points of interest.

he Watermelons Blooming.

From the Camilla, Ga., Clarion.

Watermelon vines are blooming in some of the fields of this, the melon section of Georgia. The stand is rather better than usual. Vines grow rapidly in dry warm weather and the Clarion's latch string will be hanging out for the first fine melon of the season in a very few weeks.

Fortunate to Have Them.

From the Hawkinsville, Ga., Gazette.

Sheep shearing is now the work of some of our people. Fortunate are they who have the sheep to shear. The market has opened well.

Gifts at the Wedding Feast.

From the Jasper County, Ga., News.

Among the rare treats used on the wedding table, at the marriage of Mr. Allen and Miss Watkins in Jackson last week, was a dish of preserves that were made by the bride's mother, just after her marriage seventeen years ago.

Done in the Ordinary's Court.

Yesterday Judge Calhoun appointed James Mason temporary administrator on the estate of George W. Haltiwanger and Sarah T. Holbrook temporary administratix of F. W. Holbrook. Lewis Freeman filed a schedule of personalty.

Governor Troup's Last Resting Place.

From the Dublin, Ga., Post.

Mr. H. J. Bedgood, an artist of Lovett, has succeeded in getting a picture of the tombstone of the lamented Governor George M. Troup, whose resting place is among the pines of upper Montgomery county. But few of our citizens have seen the spot, while nearly all have heard of it. On the stone wall which encloses the grave and monument is the following inscription:

GEORGE MITCHELL TROUP,
BORN SEPTEMBER 8TH, 1780.
DIED APRIL 26TH 1856.
No epitaph can tell his worth
The history of Georgia perpetuates his patriotism. There he teaches us, the argument being exhausted, to "stand by our arms."

The picture is 5x8 inches, and those who have had the pleasure of visiting the grave of the distinguished Georgian say it is a good representation, and doubtless the many true friends of Governor Troup would be very glad to have one of them.

He Killed the Wolf.

From the LaGrange, Ga., Reporter.

Walter P. Stinson, who left this county in '85, and is now at Speer, Texas, shot, fought and killed the largest wolf that had ever been seen by the old hunters of that vicinity. The animal was in the act of devouring a goat when attacked and made a desperate fight to the end.

MAKING SCALES.

A NEW INDUSTRY FOR THE SOUTH AT CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

How the Work is Taking—Making Standard Scales Equal to Any in the Country—Starting the "Test Car"—An Important Enterprise—Other Notes.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 14.—[Special Correspondence The Constitution.]—Some four months ago I came to Chattanooga to see the sights, as the saying goes, and had an all night job of it trying to find a lodging place for my weary bones. For some weeks past I have heard it silently talked around that matters and things in general were quieting down here to a considerable extent. Yesterday I dropped in again and found the same noisy bustle, the same hurrying, busy crowds and more new houses than I ever dreamed could have found their way up in so short a space of time. Then, too, I found the same difficulty securing a room, and hung around the Read house a couple of hours, waiting for a vacancy to occur. The clerk remarked that they could not handle the crowds, and that it had been just this way ever since I was here last December. Colonel McGowan, of the Times, whom I met as he was going to his highland home, on the "dummy line," asked me soothingly: "Did you ever see another Chattanooga?" Well, it is a remarkable city, and the colonel is willing to risk his judgment on there being some 35,000 or 40,000 people here now.

I was out around town yesterday, looking at things, when I stumbled across a new industry recently started here, which will make interesting reading for THE CONSTITUTION'S followers. The manufacture of yard, railroad and floor scales has never been followed in the south, the Howe and Fairbanks companies having heretofore enjoyed a monopoly of the business all over the country. The Fairbanks people started a branch establishment at Birmingham some time ago, but the Chattanooga concern, known as the Southern Scale works, bought them out, and are now the sole occupants of the field throughout the south. Mr. Paul M. Atkinson, who married Miss Lula Hurst, is one of the company, and Mr. Allen, one of the finest mechanics in the country, is another. Mr. Allen is an old experienced scale maker, having been with the Howe company a number of years. The present establishment has been in operation only since last September, but they have rapidly extended their works until now they cover almost the entire south. That they should do this is but the ligitimate outgrowth of the natural advantages afforded the manufacturer of almost everything in the south. The Southern Scale company has a capital of $25,000, and will do from $50,000 to $75,000 worth of business this year.

The manufacture of weighing scales is an interesting work and requires some delicate and close calculations in putting the parts accurately together. But Mr. Allen, who does the mechanical headwork here in the scale line, has been remarkably successful and knows his business thoroughly. I am told that the average track scales used over the country are out of balance anywhere from six to twenty-five pounds, generally, but so perfectly adjusted are the Chattanooga make of scales that they guarantee the beam to rise with the weight of a silver dollar. Senator Brown had a scale put in at his Dade county coal mines, the other day, with the contract to be accepted only on condition that a silver dollar would elevate the beam. The scales were put up, properly adjusted, up went the polished brass beam at the drop of a dollar—and Mr. Allen thinks it would have gone up equally as well "at the drop of the hat." The Southern Scale company has recently made contracts with nearly all the leading southern railroads, for testing and keeping in repair all the track scales. They do extra heavy work for the Queen and Crescent line, besides furnishing and building nearly all the furnace scales through the south. They are just now finishing the only "test cars" in the south, and there are only three of these cars in the country. Track scales and all others are liable to get out of adjustment every few months, and it is a matter of great importance to have them properly adjusted. A furnace could and would naturally suffer great loss in weighing its ores and metal if the scales should show 50 or 100 pounds against them, as is frequently the case. Concerning the test car Mr. Allen said:

"The car is 11 feet in length and 6 feet 4 inches from center to center of axle. It is composed entirely of iron and weighs 12,500 pounds, to which is added 12,500 United States standard test weights—making a test of 25,000 pounds, over each section of the scale. The improvements claimed on these cars over those used by the Pennsylvania and other northern roads are: That carrying an amount of test weights equal to the weight of car, the latter can always be tested and brought to the required weight, thereby making up for the wear and tear of the car. We will run this car in connection with our repair shops, and there will be in charge of the car an experienced scale repairer, who will be prepared to do all repairs found necessary. The steel pivots and bearings being the only parts about scales that wear out, they can be renewed—and many scales that are now comparatively useless can be renewed and made as good as new. And in this connection we would state that all small scales sent to us to be repaired will receive prompt and careful attention, and charges for same will be reasonable. We are prepared to contract with railroads, to keep all their scales in repair, by the year, and would be pleased to submit prices for any work required. Our facilities are unsurpassed. We are the only company in the south owning and operating test cars of any kind, and hope to fill a long felt want, as indicated to us by the management of many of our southern roads. Test cars are essential to continued accuracy of track scales, and we trust we may receive your encouragement in our efforts in this direction."

"Located as we are, at a central point in the south, we can be on the ground on short notice to look after the interest of our scales in case of accident, and, in this connection, we would say that parties using our railroad track scales have free use of our standard iron test car—weight 20,000 pounds. This car is built especially for testing track scales, and, being short, will test each section separately, and much more thoroughly than a small quantity of test weights. This we know will be appreciated by parties who have frequent occasion to test their scales. The quantity of metal in our scale is from 20 to 50 per cent greater than that used by other manufacturers, and also contains a greater per cent of wrought iron. All the pivots (which are extra heavy) and bearings are of the best steel, and loops and clevises are forged from Norway iron, inlaid with steel. The above advantages claimed are peculiar features of our own and well worth the careful investigation of purchasers. In manufacturing railroad track scales our aim is not to make one with which to undersell others, but to produce one, the merit of which, will in competition with other scales secure us the trade. We can see opportunities for the manufacture of railroad track scales at a greatly reduced cost, by lessening the amount and lowering the grade of material used, which would, perhaps, give temporary satisfaction, but we place a higher value upon the future reputation of our scales than the temporary benefits to be derived from such action, and we trust that purchasers will see that it is safe to rely upon goods produced upon this policy. Our company is composed partly of skilled mechanics who have devoted years to study and practical work on railroad track scales, and we employ only such mechanics as have the skill and ability to carry out in practice our purpose and determination to produce a railroad track scale superior in design, workmanship, accuracy and durability to that of any other scale made. We invite mechanics to carefully investigate our improvements, and we would suggest to railroad companies and others interested, that they have their engineers or superintendents investigate for themselves the facts in the case before placing an order."

In addition to this Allen & Atkinson control the Standard Scale company, manufacturing United States standard wagon scales for stocks, cotton, coal, grain, etc. The same wagon scale other companies sell at $120 they sell at $60, and they are in every way as good as any made in America. They also make all kinds of ... scales and trucks for stores and warehouses. All in all, I have found these scale works an interesting study, and they certainly deserve every possible success. That they will have it no one can question. C. T. L.

No. 11 Kimball House, in Kimball House, Atlanta, Ga.

No. 634 Market street, Central Block, Chattanooga, Tenn.

AUCTION. AUCTION.

WE WILL SELL AT PUBLIC OUTCRY ON MONday, May 23, 3 o'clock sharp, on the ground, the 5-room cottage on the beautiful elevated lot at the head of Forest avenue on Jackson street. The house is comfortable, 5-room cottage, well on back veranda. The lot 62 feet on Jackson street and runs back 125 feet, is beautifully shaded, street cars pass the door. The property belongs to a nonresident, and will be sold without reserve to the highest bidder. See plats and attend the sale. Terms very liberal, viz: ⅓ cash, ⅓ in six months, balance in four years. Frierson & Scott.

PONCE DE LEON.

A speculation and a bargain for the right man.

We are instructed to offer the old Ponce de Leon hotel property for sale—4¾ acres just across the railroad tracks from Ponce de Leon springs, and within 200 yards of Angier spring.

The ground is rolling, just suited for a park, retired and private, and yet very accessible to both the railroad and street cars. Large, grand, old original forest trees cover a large portion of it. A lake could be made in the southeast corner at very small expense. No other property do we know that is so susceptible of being made a beautiful resort.

This property is right on the road to the new DRIVING PARK and Fair Grounds.

The continuation of North Avenue, which would go under the railroad track, will run the full length of the property on the East side. The Richmond and Danville railroad have a depot, where all local trains stop, right at the property, while the two street car lines are only a few steps away. This property has not been offered for sale heretofore, the owners expecting that it would be used for a sanitarium.

It is just outside the city. The situation is one of the grandest about Atlanta.

For a "Relay" house, Restaurant, Bowling Alley and place of resort, there is nothing equal to it about the city.

For a Family Hotel there is no location equal to it. Common sense will convince any thinking man that a good, well-kept hotel, would pay from the day it was built.

It will subdivide into Thirty choice building lots, though it should be kept in a body.

Call at our office for further particulars, after inspecting the property.

The present buildings could be converted into a bowling alley and restaurant, at small expense. Frierson & Scott.

GEORGIA RAILROAD—65 ACRE FRUIT, GRASS and truck farm. This is one mile east of Decatur. All trains stop here (at the water tank) in front of the house. Over 2,000 feet railroad front, 8-room dwelling, large barn, with other outbuildings, an abundance of fruit, good orchard, grapes, etc. Splendidly watered, good well. Will sell all together or divide to suit purchasers. Now is the time to secure the most desirable home in the market. Frierson & Scott.

ON JACKSON—VACANT LOT, 62¼X242½. Price $2,000. Submit offers, it is a gem, and must be sold.

DECATUR—40-ACRE FRUIT AND TRUCK farm just beyond the J. C. Bucher place. Good orchard, fruit, etc. Comfortable 7-room house, choice shrubbery and a nice home. Dirt cheap; only $2,000.

WHY PAY RENT WHEN YOU CAN BUY THAT lovely 9 room residence. No 64 Georgia avenue, on the street car line to Grant Park. Go look at it and come in like a little man and say you will take it. It only require $750 cash, the balance can be paid in rent, only $30 per month. Every room, excepting the parlor, has closets; well of splendid water in back veranda, good neighborhood and everything desirable. Frierson & Scott.

Henry L. Wilson, Real Estate Agent, No. 28 Peachtree Street.

SENATOR VEST called on the president last Thursday. We trust all has been forgiven.

WE have not seen a full statement of the new civil service rules, but we are satisfied that they are excellent. The republican clerks in the departments at Washington are "cussing" them.

GOVERNOR BOB TAYLOR, of Tennessee, is described as "a jolly fellow who laughs at adverse criticisms." What a blessing it is that the young governor has such an elastic self-complacency and such an impenetrable mental epidermis!

KENTUCKY republicans have put out a full state ticket, and threaten to make a lively campaign. They are confident that with diligent effort they can hold General Buckner's majority for governor down to the neighborhood of 50,000.

THE spirit of "regulation" is rife in Illinois, the state which owns Senator Cullom, one of the architects of our great interstate commerce bill. The legislature of that commonwealth is about to regulate the telephone business. What next?

ST. LOUIS is already reaching out her hands for the next national democratic convention. Several other cities will be found in the list of applicants. It is no small honor to entertain a convention which is to name the next president of the United States.

PHILADELPHIA is bragging because she has received 12,000 immigrants this year. This is doing pretty well for Philadelphia, but New York scooped in 10,000 immigrants in one day last week. That was the biggest day's work on record in this line of business.

THE last report of the national bureau of education places the total school population of the thirty-eight states at 16,863,265 and that of the territories at 306,126. The total income for public schools in all the states and territories, except Kentucky, is $113,521,395.

FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL STEPHENSON is a democrat from away back. He looks after the fourth class postmasters who number 50,000. During the twenty-two months of his present official service, Mr. Stephenson has put 35,000 democrats into office.

MICHIGAN abolished the gallows several years ago. Crimes which are usually punished with death are said to have increased greatly in that state since it ceased to hang felons. An effort has recently been made to re-enact the old law, but the legislature refused to do so.

SENATOR HEARST'S son is conducting the San Francisco Examiner for his father. Young Hearst went to Harvard, and he will have nobody on his staff who is not a Harvard graduate. One of the consequences of this is that old man Hearst is compelled to ante every month to keep this remarkable newspaper afloat.

MR. O'BRIEN'S visit to Canada does not promise any great benefit to the Irish cause. He has already aroused bitter opposition, and "counter demonstrations" are made whenever O'Brien appears. That the patriotic Irishman means well, nobody can doubt, but there is a wide difference of opinion as to the wisdom of the course he has adopted.

MR. GEORGE W. CHILDS, of Philadelphia, was fifty-eight years old last Wednesday. He has done a great deal of good in those fifty-eight years. On every birthday he is the recipient of congratulations from all parts of this country and from Europe. They are words of kindness and of gratitude which come from people in every condition of life.

THE memory of Balzac, the truest of French novelists, is to be honored with a monument to be erected in his native city of Tours. The greatest names in France appear on the committee which has this movement in charge. Balzac is a remarkable instance of genius, struggling through sorrow, poverty and neglect, to be crowned with the laurels of posthumous fame.

THE New York Star takes no stock in the extra session talk. It says: There is no substance in the talk about an extra session of congress. The financial exigency is not one that cannot be met by executive action under existing laws. It is true that the situation might become serious if mismanaged, and that even with good management a contingency may arise requiring congressional action before December. But the chances are against such a contigency, and its occurrence will not be anticipated.

POPE LEO is considered one of the most adept diplomats of the time. He has been successful in all his negotiations with foreign powers, and has a chance to succeed in a great undertaking which he now has on hand. It is a project to reconcile the Greek and Latin churches. The Greek church now recognizes the czar of Russia as its spiritual father, but the pope is not without hope that by means of his newly established influence with Germany he may induce the czar to relinquish to Rome the control of this church.

PEOPLE in this country are paying [illegible] attention to the American exhibition in progress in London. Still the [illegible] is of great importance to us. It will give the English people a clearer conception of the extent and variety of the resources of the United States. The grounds occupied by the exhibition cover twenty-three acres, and the main gallery is twelve hundred feet long. In this great gallery, plans of the principal American cities are presented. The exhibition is a private enterprise. It is managed by a joint stock company, which raised one-third of its capital in England and the rest in the United States.

Georgia's Choice.

The death of Justice Woods makes a vacancy on the bench of the supreme court of the United States which will be filled by a democrat. The appointee will naturally come from the south, not only because Justice Woods was appointed from Georgia, but also because among the eight survivors on that bench there is not one from this section. There are many able and capable lawyers in the south who would fill this high station well. But there is one whom THE CONSTITUTION considers as peculiarly qualified for it by the judicial turn of his mind and by his attainments as a jurist. We refer to Hon. N. J. Hammond, of Atlanta.

The Georgia delegation in congress would be a unit in favor of Mr. Hammond's appointment, and there is nothing that they could do which would meet a more unanimous indorsement from the people of this state. Such a suggestion would be heartily seconded by the democrats who served in congress with this distinguished Georgian during the eight years of his conspicious and honorable presence in that body.

A Busy Five Months.

In less than five months from today the gates of the Piedmont exposition will be thrown open to the public. An exhibit of resources never equalled in the south will be arranged in departments and ready for sight-seers. A crowd of a hundred and fifty thousand people will have been to Atlanta, or on their way to the city to see the great show.

In less than five months! And yet not a spade full of dirt has been turned on the grounds. The crops are still growing in the places to be occupied by the racetrack, the grand stand and exposition building. Not a bush has been cut, nor a foot of fence raised. It is almost incredible that within the short space left, barely one hundred working days, the wilderness which is the site for Piedmont park, can be transferred into a decorous and beautiful exposition ground, with every adjunct for holding a first-class fair; and yet it will be done. By the end of next week not less than a thousand men will be at work under the various committees, bringing order out of chaos; and by the tenth of October everything will be ready for the public to walk in the gates, and see the best exposition and fair ever held in the southern states.

To do this will require every moment of time the directors and managers can give to the work. For the past two weeks they have held daily meetings, and almost every night have met for consultation. It is necessary that they should have the fullest sympathy and support of the public, and that they should not be forced to spend half of their timein canvassing for subscriptions. Every citizen of Atlanta especially has an interest, and should have a pride, in the success of this first exposition. There is not a man in the city who is able to give to any purpose, who cannot afford to give something to this. It is agreed on all hands that the exposition of 1881 added five million dollars to the wealth of this city—has built scores of shops and factories, and kept Atlanta in the line of progress. As much or more can be hoped for from the coming exposition. Let every man then who has not subscribed to the exposition fund, come without being asked, and help out this grand enterprise. Those who can do so should subscribe five hundred dollars, of which only twenty per cent can be called in one year. It is believed that this twenty per cent will be returned after the fair is over. The North Georgia fair ran for five years in the seventies, and returned every dollar of subscription. This exposition ought to do as well. Those who cannot subscribe five hundred dollars should subscribe whatever they feel able to give. Any amount will be gratefully received; but there should be some amount from every merchant, capitalist, manufacturer, or professional man in Atlanta.

We say to our friends throughout the south that the exposition will be worthy of their exhibits and their attendance. The main building will be roomier and much handsomer than the main building of the cotton exposition. The grounds will be more beautiful and better adapted to the purposes of the fair. In addition to the superb display of machinery made at the cotton exposition in 1881, there will be halls for agricultural products, an art gallery for fine paintings and statuary, and five hundred pens and stalls for live stock. The south has never had such opportunity to make display of her rich resources as this will afford. The president has signified his interest in the south, and in its development, by promising to be present at the exposition. He will be greeted here by thousands upon thousands of southern people who have come together to learn from the object lesson of the exposition, progress in farming, in manufactures, and in general affairs. Visitors will come in large numbers from the north and northwest to see the gathered riches of the richest section of this union. Those communities or individuals who fail to make an exhibit of their resources at the exposition will make a mistake. Those who fail to see the exposition will miss the most interesting and instructive show held in the south for many years. The mornings of the two weeks will be devoted to studying the resources of the country as grouped in the exposition hall. Everything possible has been done to fill the afternoons with pleasant programmes. Purses aggregating [illegible] thousand dollars have been offered for races. Three thousand dollars will be offered for military prizes. There will be competition in every athletic sport, grand displays of fireworks will be made at night, and every one who can afford to give three or four days to Atlanta during the two weeks of her exposition may be sure of instruction and entertainment.

Death of Justice W. B. Woods.

At his home in Washington yesterday Justice W. B. Woods, of the supreme court of the United States, passed away.

Death was a relief to him as he had been hopelessly sick for many weeks and had suffered intensely.

The friends of Judge Woods in Georgia were surprised when they heard a few months ago that he was a victim of consumption. When he left Atlanta six years ago he was the picture of robust manhood and hearty health. Several months since his physicians advised him that rest was imperative. He left the bench and sought recreation in southern California. The disease steadily gained on him, however, and at last he turned his face toward his home with no better hope than that he might die there.

Judge Woods was a native of Ohio and when a young man began the practice of law. He distinguished himself during the war and rose to the rank of major-general of volunteers in the federal army. After the war he returned to the practice of the law and was appointed by President Grant to the United States district bench in Alabama. When the fifth judicial circuit was formed he was promoted to its bench and soon afterwards moved to Atlanta. In December, 1880, President Hayes, who had been his friend in the army, appointed him to the supreme court. He was credited to Georgia.

As a judge on the district, circuit and supreme benches, Judge Woods presided with dignity and ability. As a man he was highly respected and esteemed by all who knew him, and during the several years of his residence here he and his family made many friends in Atlanta who deeply sympathize with the bereaved ones.

The City Building Problem.

THE CONSTITUTION presents this morning one of the most interesting articles on the all-prevailing topic of city building it has ever had the pleasure of printing. The question has proven a problem of no easy solution, particularly in many communities throughout the south, where nature has done, apparently, everything in the way of resources. A thousand plans, theories, designs and schemes have been placed before the public within a few months past, but many of them have proven impracticable and difficult to carry out. Like many a model that some patient, persistent inventor has struggled over day and night for years, that would revolutionize the world, the "model city" that has been built over and over again on paper that would not materialize when put into practical shape. It remained, however, for the little town of Athens, Tennessee, to present not only the most feasible, but to our mind the most sensible plan on which to build and develop her resources into a city. Without going into full details editorially concerning the project of our East Tennessee friends, we simply invite attention to the admirably written article elsewhere in our columns from the pen of Mr. Charles T. Logan, one of our special correspondents.

A Fine Poem.

In another column we print a very fine poem from the pen of Mr. W. T. Dumas, whose strong verses entitled "The Dinner Horn" will be remembered by our readers. The picture of the old garden is perfect in its way, and though the local coloring is intense, so to speak, there are few of our readers who are familar with country life and country scenes in the south but will feel that the poet has described a garden in which they have rambled and played in happier days.

Mr. Dumas seems to have a future before him.

MRS. CLEVELAND is a very busy woman. It is said she reads all the notices of herself in the newspapers about herself. She has this consolation: All the newspapers of both parties concede that she is not only beautiful but charming.

THE New York Star copies what THE CONSTITUTION says of the status of dramatic criticism in New York city, and heads it "Sour Grapes." The question is, how can rotten grapes be sour?

IT is to be hoped that some of our exchanges will follow the example of the New York World, and print pictures. Pictures are a great relief.

POOR little Theodore Goosemelt has been making another speech in a New York barroom. Theodore seems to be addicted to this sort of thing.

THE New York World has an editorial headed "The Doomed Sparrow." This is such a palpable typographical error that we cannot refrain from calling attention to it.

PERSONS AND THINGS.

QUEEN KAPIOLANI has heard such interesting stories regarding the glories of the metropolis that instead of sailing for England next Saturday she will remain in New York for two weeks after her arrival. Her astonishment at the attractions presented by this great country has upset all her previous plans. Kalakana evidently did not fully post her about all that is of interest to the traveler in the United States.

JAMES G. BLAINE will sail for Europe on the 8th of June. Two double staterooms on the steamship Ems, of the North German Lloyd line, have been engaged for himself, his wife and his two daughters. Captain Jungst, one of the best sailors on the Atlantic, will look after his comfort.

THE time is near at hand when Jas. O'Rourke catcher on the New York league nine, will present himself at the Yale law school to stand examination for the degree of L.L.D. O'Rourke is said to be rather uncertain as to his success, and may have to wait another year for the desired parchment.

NEW YORK business signs present some curious coincidences. Taylor & Cutter is a clothing firm in the Bowery. A dealer in curled hair is named Willcomb. A Bleecker street sign reads "I. Godlove." Of metropolitan milk dealers, one is Well and another Water. Currie and Rice do business together. Manhelp is a name on a sign next to one bearing the name of Godlove on Broadway.

The Uncrowned King—Acrostic.

Chained and powerless stand before thee
Hosts of England's mighty men;
Armed with strength no sword can vanquish,
Roused by fire that ne'er can languish,
Lead to victory once again.
Every heart that loves its freedom
Showers its blessings o'er thy name,
Standing in the midst of sages
Peering downward through the ages
All the world shall sound thy fame.
Raise her name among the nations
Nerve her sons with zealous flame
Every gleam that gilds her glory
Lights the page that tells thy story
Linked with her immortal fame.

Atlanta, Ga. J. F. Shirley.

TOWN TOPICS.

Pleasant Bits of Local News and Gossip Picked Up Here and There.

Colonel Sam Grafton, once of Atlanta, but now of Baltimore, was in town a day or two ago.

"I see," he remarked, "that Secretary Lamar snubbed the royal folks from the Cannibal islands. Well, I don't blame him. I've been to that country. About 1840 I was on a whaling vessel in the Pacific and we used to go to the Sandwich islands about once in six months to recruit. The ship I was on was commanded by Captain Russell, who was supposed to be a son of the king. He had at least been raised by that royal person. I have visited the spot where the savages killed and ate Captain Cook. Oh, they were tough cases in those days. They lived on fish and poi—one finger, two finger, three finger poi. The poi was a kind of vegetable mush eaten with the fingers and named according to its consistency one finger, two finger and three finger poi. Yes, yes, we used to buy hogs from the natives, paying for them with cheap cloth and using the hog for the yard-stick. No matter how fat the hog or how lean, or how poor the cloth, you would give just so much of the cloth as it would take to go from the tip of the hog's nose to the end of his tail. You could buy nearly anything on the island for a six-inch piece of hoop iron, which would be made into a spear head, and a man with a jack knife could very nearly buy the kingdom. The king was a great one. On big occasions he would wear an old navy uniform of faded blue with gilt buttons. The king's subjects would never wear more than one garment at a time. A fellow would wear a hat or a pair of shoes or a coat, but you couldn't get him to wear all three or even two at once. Yes, yes, it was a tough country when I knew it."

It is not only possible, but it is exceedingly probable, that Atlanta will have a type foundry before long. An eastern type foundry company has been looking over the south with a view to establishing a branch foundry. Representatives of the company visited all the principal southern cities, even going as far south as Florida. It has been decided that of all the cities of the south Atlanta is the most desirable point for the new enterprise. Richmond is too far north and has a branch foundry. Charleston is too much to one side. New Orleans is too far to the other side. Atlanta is the happy medium. Mr. W. C. Dodson, who knows what he is talking about, says the foundry would certainly pay. About three years ago Mr. Dodson, who found himself frequently called upon to make estimates for printing outfits, decided to carry a small stock of printing material in connection with his book and job printing business. He began on a small scale but the business grew very rapidly and has recently forced him into larger quarters. He is familiar with the movement to establish a type foundry in Atlanta and will take an active interest in the enterprise. He says if Atlanta will take $30,000 worth of stock an additional $30,000 will be taken by eastern capitalists, and the new enterprise will come here. Such a plant as is proposed would employ about one hundred men and a like number of boys and girls, and would be a very important addition to the business of the city. A type foundry in Atlanta could scarcely fail to be a paying business since there is no such an establishment in the south, and the whole business of type-making in the United States is controlled by only about thirty foundries. The failure of a type founding firm is something almost if not quite unknown in business circles.

It takes a great deal of work to make type. Every letter has to be handled by five persons after it is cast. The first thing done is cutting the letter on the end of a fine piece of steel forming a punch. The punch is driven into a piece of polished copper, which makes the matrix. The matrix for the face of the letter and the mould for the body of the type are put into the type casting machine, fed with melted metal, and the letters are turned out one at a time, dropping from the machine like the ticking of a watch. A great deal of work is required in finishing type, and when at last they are apparently all right each letter is examined under a microscope, and the defective ones are rejected.

William Euclid Young, who was once a citizen of Atlanta, but who has since 1863 been a broker in New York, has a big scheme on hand. He is secretary of an organization that proposes to boom "the Christopher Columbus exposition of 1892." Mr. Young and his associates want to celebrate with a world's fair the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America. Mr. Young wants the fair to last all summer—"from early spring till late autumn."

A Whitehall street car was crowded a day or two ago when a young man with a red face came pushing his way amongst the passengers. He stopped in front of a fat man, held on to a strap and leaning down said softly:

"Lend me a nickel."

The fat man pretended not to hear.

"Say, lend me a nickel," repeated the young man.

The fat man did not move.

The young man shook him and said loud enough for every passenger to hear.

"Lend me a nickel! I say, lend me a nickel!"

The fat man sighed, slowly drew out a wallet and fished out a five-cent piece.

"That's all right," said the young man. "I've got a quarter. I just wanted to see if I had a friend on this car," and he walked up to the driver, had his quarter changed and dropped his fare in the box.

There is an ownerless dog on South Forsyth street—a sort of canine Free Joe. He made his appearance in that part of the city several months ago and took quarters under a house, where he has been allowed to make himself at home. He is a good looking fellow with long, curly hair, and appears to have shepherd dog blood in his veins. He is a well-behaved dog, dignified and quiet, never disturbing people as other dogs do. When he wants anything he emerges from his hiding place and walks abroad. When it suits him to do so, he returns to his lodgings. No one ever speaks to him and he in turn pays no attention to anything or anybody. He goes when he pleases, comes when he pleases and stays as long as he pleases. He is not a wild dog but he is in every sense a free dog. He manages to keep in good condition The only change noticeable is that he grows more thoughtful and serious every day.

"Everybody in our section of the country," said Captain Wes. Murphy, of Columbus, yesterday, "is delighted with the governor's appointment of Governor Smith as judge of the Chattahoochee circuit. No other appointment could have been nearly so pleasing. There is not a dissenting voice. Governor Smith will, I understand, be a candidate for election by the legislature. If he is he will meet with no opposition from Columbus."

"Did you ever notice the vast difference in snores," remarked Judge Nisbet, as he sat in one of the big chairs in the executive department, Friday morning, recuperating from his all night ride from Macon. "I couldn't go to sleep last night, so I amused myself by listening to the different snores emitted by the occupants of the various berths of our sleeper. Here a bass, there a treble, then a contralto, or a high soprano—in fact, about as many different keys as there were passengers. As none snored loudly, the effect of the whole was rather pleasing than otherwise. But no two snored alike."

"Speaking of snoring," chimed in Judge John I Hall, "reminds me that Colonel Acton, once with THE CONSTITUTION, was the worst snorer I ever saw—or heard. Some years ago Acton and I were stopping at the same hotel. It was in a small town and he and I were assigned to the same room. Well, he got to sleep before I did, and the result was that I didn't get to sleep at all. Such snoring I never heard! I would wake him up in the hope that I might get to sleep before he began making that infernal noise again, but it was no use. He beat me every time. Finally I got him awake and said, 'Look here, my friend'—I didn't know him at the time—'I'll pay you if you'll stay awake until I get to sleep.' 'All right,' he grunted, and in two minutes was snoring louder than ever.

"It was utterly impossible for me to sleep. About four o'clock, to add to my desperation, a dog down in the hotel yard set up a most unearthly howling. That was more than I could stand, so I got up to see what was the matter with the dog. The night was a beautiful one, almost as bright as day. What do you think I saw when I looked out? There sat the dog, howling and barking at the top of his lungs, and looking directly at our window. He evidently appreciated Acton just as highly as I did."

Atlanta is to be congratulated on the dress makers in this city. No city in the south has a more skillful, tasty and artistic corps of dress makers than Atlanta. A lady of refinement and taste, who recently had opportunity to compare some of Miss Cathay's work on some party dresses with the work of one of New York's fine dress makers, said she preferred Miss Cathay's work of the two. It is a fact that fewer ladies in Atlanta have their dresses made in northern cities than any city in the south. There really is no reason they should. Our dress makers are just as tasty, skillful and artistic, and they deserve the patronage of our citizens.

ECHOES FROM THE PEOPLE.

Family Names.

Subscriber, Red Oak, Texas: How did the different names originate?

The Greeks, with few exceptions, had no family, or sire, names. The Romans had three names; first, a proper name (prænomen), the distiction of the individual, like our baptismal or Christian name; second, the name of the class (nomen), and third, the family name (cognomen). Sometimes to these were added, on account of act of valor or event, a fourth name (agnomen), as Publius (prænomen), Cornelius (the clan of Cornelius), Scipio (the family), and Africanus (the agnomen), because of his victories in Africa. The prænomen was generally not written in full, as M. for Marcus, P. for Publius, etc.; as M. Tullius Cicero, i. e., "Marcus," to distinguish him from his brother Quintus. Tullius, the clan, and Cicero, the family. In Germany and the Teutonic nations family or surnames (or as it should be spelled, "sirnames." i. e., sire or father's name) were little used before the fourteenth century. Everyone had a baptismal name only. The most ancient method was to add the father's name to their own, as John-son, William-son, David-son, etc. The Arabians still follow this custom; e. g., Hali's son Yoar is called Ebu Hali (Hali's son) and Yoar's son would be Hebu Yoar. The surnames given in England about the time of William the Conqueror were selected, like the agnomen of the Romans, from some peculiar circumstance relating to the individual. Thus, the earl of Anjou obtained the surname of Plantagenet from the well known story, and his descendants were called Plantagenets. Fitz (from the old French fils, meaning "son"), Mac (Scottish), Ap, (Welsh), O' (Irish), Ez (Spanish) and Ben were all prefixes, meaning in those several languages "son." But Fitz meant illegitimate son. The German sohn, Swedish son, Dutch son are the same. German von, Dutch van, French de mean "of" or "from," referring to the residence or descent. On the establishment of the feudal system, new names were introduced, derived either from occupation, as Smith, Turner, Carpenter, Fuller, etc., from place of nativity, as French, Welsh, etc., or from personal complexion or other peculiarities, as White, Brown, Black, Long, Short, Sweet, Smart, Coy, Martin, Wren, etc.

Rather Mixed.

S. B. Murphy, N. C.: From what is the expression, "Mind your P's and Q's" derived?

In all houses in the olden time, when chalk "scores" were marked upon the wall, or behind the door of the taproom, it was customary to put the initials "P" and "Q" at the head of every man's account to show the number of "pints" and "quarts" for which he was in arrears; and we may presume many a friendly rustic to have tapped his neighbor on the shoulder when he was indulging too freely in his potations, and to have exclaimed as he pointed to the chalk score, "Mind your P's and Q's, man!" Other explanations are given of the origin of this phrase, however; one writer supposing it came from "Mind your toupee's and your queues;" the "toupee" being the artificial locks of hair on the head, and the "queue" the pigtail of olden time. Charles Knight thinks it was derived from the schoolroom or the printing office, as the forms of the small "p" and "q" in the Roman type have always been puzzling to the child and the printer's apprentice, from the fact that in one the downward stroke is on the left of the oval and in the other on the right; this, then, is a literal signification.

Trousers.

J. C. A., Grenada, Miss.: When did trousers come into general use?

Trousers came into use for general wear with the French revolution. The gentleman, the supporter of royalty and sound constitutional principles, wore breeches. The term "sans culottes" sufficiently explained what were not worn by the masses who forced constitutional reform into revolution. By an apparent contradiction of purpose and principle the "sans culottes" who denounced every one who wore breeches finally went beyond their opponents and wore twice as much cloth around their legs; in a word, adopted the modern trousers and made them the badge of a party as well known as a class. Napoleon, who was too thin at one period of his life and too stout at another, to look his best in small clothes, nevertheless wore them on state occasions after he had set up a throne and gone into the emperor business. His army was the first that wore trousers, and trousers made progress in general adoption step by step with the march of the French army. The French trousers and neat gaiter were seen in Egypt, in Spain, in Italy, in Germany, in Poland and Russia, on the banks of the Tagus and those of the Vistula. People thought that the manner in which a great conquering nation clad its legs was the model, and when the trouser wearers marched over the wearers of pigtails and knee-breeches at Jena and Auerstadt, a decision was given from which the world did not care to appeal. The world is usually easily convinced of the wisdom of the victor. England stood out the longest against trousers, but finally she yielded and her army marched to Waterloo wearing the universal leg funnels. Our grandfathers generally fell in with the way of the world, though federalists here and there would not yield. There is a story of a clergyman who, greeted with the rough inquiry, "How are you, priest?" responded, "How are you, democrat? How do you know I'm a priest?" "By your dress. How do you know I'm a democrat?" "By your address." Doubtless the clergyman wore knee-breeches, while the admirer of Jefferson and "dangerous French principles" clothed his legs in trousers.

Georgia Avenue Being Cut Down and Made Ready for a Number of Handsome Residences—Pryor Street and Peachtree More Than Five Miles Long—Other Notes.

"A policeman don't often tell you news," remarked Captain Crim yesterday, "but have you been out on Georgia avenue lately?"

"The new route to the Grant park?"

"Yes. If you haven't been out you ought to go. Do you know that's about the busiest end of town just now? A squad of hands has absolutely torn up the earth out there, and the entire section has undergone a change. Why, you wouldn't know it."

"Doing some big work, eh?"

"Well, yes. The change is really marvelous, and the amount of work over there is more than any one would dream of. Pryor street is now one of the longest and prettiest streets in the city. It is really a broad avenue, and if you start at the First Methodist church and go to the south end of the street you will travel two and a half miles. Some people say that the street is nothing more nor less than a southern extension of Peachtree."

"They ought to call it Peachtree."

"Well, I ain't got anything to do with naming the streets, you see, and a gentlemen said to me today coming in on the car that Pryor was bound to become one of the most prominent resident streets in the city, because it was the continuation of Peachtree street southward, and an examination of the city map will show that the gentleman is right. Pryor and Peachtree streets together form a continuous street nearly five miles long."

"Much building out that way?"

"Yes. On Georgia avenue quite a number of elegant houses are being erected by the Capital City Land and Improvement company. The avenue is a broad and splendidly graded drive from Windsor street to Grant park. The Metropolitan street car company is engaged in extending its Pryor street line out the avenue to the park. The avenue has brought to public attention a portion of the city that is bound to be settled by the very best citizens. It is only one mile from the car shed, and absolutely free from shanty settlements from Whitehall street to Grant park."

"You ought to move out?"

"Excuse me, please; I can't stand the expense. But it is a mighty nice neighborhood, let me tell you. Washington street and Capitol avenue are settled by some of the best citizens, and the high, level grounds near Georgia avenue being on the direct line of the street cars, are rapidly being bought for permanent residences. Just east of Capitol avenue a most attractive settlement has sprung up as if by magic. Every afternoon the occupants of the hundreds of carriages driving out Georgia avenue to the park look with admiration on the rosy faces of the happy children whose parents have made their homes along this splendid avenue upon the grand old hills. Then, too, right at their very doors is that lordly retreat for which the grateful hearts of children give mental praire to the grand old gentleman who gave the people such a park, and the wonderful development of Pryor street, Washington street, Capitol and Georgia avenue, is largely attributable to the location of the park. Of the park itself, hardly in its bright emerald of spring, time will not suffice to tell of its many attractions. Go and see it for yourself, and come back to the city happier for a delightful a drive."

Musical Entertainment.

The music pupils of Edgewood seminary, under direction of Mrs. O. V. Murphey, gave an entertainment on Friday evening. The opening song, "See Saw Waltz," was charmingly rendered, the happy little ones wreathed in flowers, made a picture of childish beauty and enjoyment that made older hearts beat in unison with their's. The instrumental music on two pianos, with accompaniment in several pieces by violins and cornets, reflected credit on the performers and teachers. The following was the programme:

Waltz Song—"See Saw"—Class.
Piano Solo—Miss Julia Gerding.
"Forget Me Not," Gavotte—Two pianos, cornet and violin—Miss V. Johnson and Messrs. Brooks.
Personated Ballad—"Little Bo-Peep"—Misses Belle and Emmie Murphey.
Piano Solo—Miss Q. Johnson.
"Happy Waltz"—Two pianos, violins and cornet—Misses Heney, Lola Johnson, Eliss Gerding and Messrs Brooks.
Selections from Lucia—Piano Duett—Misses Belle and Emmie Murphey.
Waltz by Coote—Two pianos, violins and cornet—Miss Nora Copelan and Messrs. Brooks.

The school, under Mrs. Murphey's direction, is preparing a sprightly operetta, which will be produced at the opera house the first week in June.

The sunflowers by the garden wall,
Unblinking, stare up at the sun;
The figs beside the gateway tall
Are purpling for my pretty one.

I lie beneath the leafy vine
That forms the arbor's grateful shade,
And watch the clusters, rich in wine,
Blush with the nectar yet unmade.

Lulled by the lazy hum of bees,
Half dozing on my bed of rue,
I hear, from yonder clump of trees,
As miles away, the ring dove's coo.

The yarrow and the cumfrey grow
Beside the walk, those brothers twain,
Wherewith my grandam many a woe
Has cured, and many a dreary pain.

And eke the fennel and the sage,
Hoarhound and catnip, famed for tea,
Stand conscious, like an eastern mage,
Of wondrous powers that in them be.

In England's merry days, hath crowned,
Proud of its noble use of yore.
Curls, scorning humbler herbs around.

And thyme that frantic drives the bees,
Contending with the butterflies
Who first the envied bloom shall seize,
And rob it of its coveted prize.

Beneath the willow stands the urn,
And Faunus there doth never cease
His dreaming marble eyes to turn
In search of Dryad-haunted Greece.

THAT FAMOUS SPRING,

WHOSE WATERS BRING HEALTH TO THE AFFLICTED.

The New Sweetwater Hotel—The Finest in the South—A Few Facts About the Health-Restoring Waters of Salt Spring the Most Popular Resort in the South.

From the remotest ages the value of miner waters in the treatment of disease have been known and appreciated. The Romans, who subjugated the ancient world, stationed their veteran legions upon the banks of the broad rivers, and in the immediate vicinity of the numerous mineral springs, to be found throughout their vast empire, and the emperors, for pleasure and health, betook themselves to the thermal waters and mineral founts of Germany and Gaul. Within the past hundred years the advancement in civilization and the arts, with increased knowledge in chemical science, have been great incentives to research and experiment, and the analysis of mineral waters by the skilled chemist proves conclusively that deep in the bowels of the earth the great Creator has formulated a simple, harmless, yet effective remedy for all those distressing conditions and diseases that afflict humanity. Analysis demonstrates that in the famous mineral waters of the world we have all those medicinal properties to be had from the apothecary's shop, in such proportions and combinations, perplexing to the druggists, and incapable of successful imitation by man. Artificial mineral waters, although largely in demand, and in taste comparing favorably with the natural springs, have never been productive of those beneficial results that from time immemorial have been attributed to the natural waters formulated and distilled in nature's laboratory. Mineral springs are common to all countries. The noted waters of Europe have a world-wide reputation, and in the United States we boast of quite a number of the health resorts, that annually are visited by thousands, with the best results. With the development of the country new springs by accident and by search are being constantly discovered—the most famous of late years being the celebrated Salt Springs, located in the county of Douglas, state of Georgia twenty miles from Atlanta, the capitol of the state. Owing to the saline character of the water, which can scarcely be detected, the confederate government during the late war, was led to attempt the manufacture of salt at the spring. In order to secure a larger flow of water than appeared at the surface of the earth, a well some twenty-eight feet in depth by eight feet in diameter was blasted in the solid rock. These efforts however proved futile, since the amount of salt to be obtained by boiling and evaporating was almost inappreciable. Several years passed away, the spring was forgotten, the well filled with sediment and drift from the hills, but the crystal water still bubbled up and lost itself in the reedy morass and wild undergrowth. In 1882 Judge J. C. Bowden upon whose land the spring was situated, from representations made to him by some of the oldest settlers of the county, and from his own observation of the healing properties of the water, was led to consult an able chemist. An analysis was made and published, which resulted in hundreds flocking to the spring from all parts of the state. By rail and private conveyance the sick and diseased hastened to Salt Springs, and the marvelous cures affected by the water attracted the attention of the general public and medical world. The analysis of this remarkable water is very interesting and convincing. The medical properties found in solution have always been recognized as among the most valuable agents of the materia medica, and of the first importance in the treatment of disease. The alkali lithia, so rare in nature, abounds in considerable proportions, rendering the water effective in dissolving calcareous deposits in the bladder, correcting and eliminating all tendency to the formation of uric acid in the system. For all forms of kidney complaints the Salt Springs water is especially adapted. It exerts a peculiar influence upon this important organ and in Bright's disease, unless the patient is sorely afflicted, renewed health and strength and permanent benefit may be confidently predicted from use of the water. In dyspepsia and indigestion the effect of the Salt Spring water is prompt and remarkable. Relief may with certainty be expected to follow its use. Hundreds throughout the country and in the city of Atlanta will gladly testify to the truth of this statement. In a late article in THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION the writer declared that three members of its editorial staff had long suffered with indigestion in its most aggravated form. Learning of the efficacy of the Salt Springs water in this disease, they betook themselves to the springs. A number of visits and copious drinking of the water entirely eradicated all dyspeptic symptoms. Impure blood is the primal cause of much suffering in the world. The many nostrums that are advertised to cleanse the blood, in the majority of cases, are productive of harm rather than good. The system becomes deranged by the use of strong minerals, the circulation is enfeebled, the life-giving principle vitiated. When the science of medicine was in its infancy, in profane and even Biblical history we learn that mineral springs were resorted to for the cure of blood and skin diseases. It is a fact not to be disputed that many persons afflicted with blood disorders of the worst type have found relief by drinking and bathing in the Salt Springs water; the appetite is increased, the digestion becomes perfect, the skin clear, and hence, by building up the system, the blood is enriched, and finally all impurities disappear.

Numerous experimental tests have proven that the Salt Springs water will bear carbonizing. Owing to the presence of certain properties in most mineral waters, the impregnation with carbonic acid gas causes a precipitate; hence, the combination of the medicinal constituents is effected, and in a short time the water becomes unfit for use. The peculiar mineral affinity of the Salt Springs water, even when highly charged with gas, does not admit of a precipitate, and water that has been carbonized for months in bottles when uncorked is found to be extremely pleasant and palatable. Arrangements are being perfected whereby the carbonized water will be placed on sale at all the principal mineral water depots in the country. It will be found to be equal of the imported waters, sparkling and exhilerating—specially adapted for lemonades, wines and clarets, and for general use as a table water, greatly aiding in the digesting and assimilating of our food. The great crowds that have visited Salt Springs during the past two years has necessitated the building of a vast hotel for the accommodation of the public, in addition to the one at the spring and the Salt Springs hotel at the station. The new Sweetwater Park hotel will be opened for the reception of guests about June 1. This immense hostelry—the property of Mr. E. W. Marsh and his associates, Mr. A. M. Inman and James A. Watson—in size, architectural design and appointments, will have few equals in this country. The rooms are large and elegantly furnished, the halls broad and ceilings high, admitting of perfect ventilation. A portico seven hundred feet in length, varying in width from twenty to thirty feet, surrounds the entire building, affording delightful promenades in the early morning and evening. The dining hall is a model of beauty and excellence, finished throughout with hard woods, the walls decorated with handsome side boards; furnished with extra large heavy French plate glass. The parlors, ball room and office, with its marble floor, present a pleasing effect, and the whole building will be radiant at night with the light of three hundred incandescent electric arcs.

The location of the Sweetwater Park hotel is all that could be desired. Salt Springs station stands twelve hundred feet above the level of the sea, perpetual breezes from the hills fan the cheeks, and from the immense tower of the hotel the Blue Ridge and Alleghany mountains can be plainly discerned in the distance, the country around presenting a delightful scene. The natural drainage at the station is perfect, the soil is of a sandy composition, and a few minutes after the heaviest rains guests may take their accustomed walks and drives without the inconvenience of slush or mud. A native grove of oaks, comprising over one hundred acres, surrounds the hotel, affording a peaceful retreat for the invalid and quiet old age. From the Sweetwater Park hotel the famous Salt Spring is reached by a narrow guage road, built and controlled by the Salt Spring company. A few minutes ride and one finds himself in the spacious pavilion erected over the spring. Its marble floor and elegant proportions present a pleasing effect, and the bath house, a short distance, is striking and picturesque. The natural formation about the spring is very peculiar: immense boulders of granite lie scattered here and there, telling, perhaps, of some great upheaval in the past, and the trees around are laden with a green moss of the finest texture. The Sweetwater Park hotel will be under the personal supervision and management of Mr. J. D. Billings, from Traverse City, Michigan. This gentleman has an enviable reputation throughout the northwest as a caterer of superior excellence, and the public, with every confidence, may expect at Salt Springs the best cuisine and unequalled accommodation.

In conclusion, we would say that Messrs. E. W. Marsh & Co., are shipping daily their unrivaled water to all parts of the United States. It has been found to bear transportation well, and under favorable conditions will keep for months in all its original strength.

For further particulars address or communicate to E. W. Marsh & Co., Salt Springs, Ga.

THE BIG SALE OF THE SEASON.

J. C. Hendrix & Co. will sell at auction Tuesday, May 17, at 3 p. m. sharp, 37 large, commanding and well shaded lots on Pryor street, Buena Vista and Fortress avenues, taking in the hill on which the largest fort around Atlanta was built and the hill has since been known as Fortress hill. The lots are well shaded and lay well, many of them fronting on the Pryor street car line which will very soon be operated by electricity and when so run the time required to reach the city will be only about ten minutes, so a home out on this commanding hill lot will be as easily reached as you could wish, from this hill you take in at a sweep the city of Atlanta and all the surrounding country. You can look over the capitol building and see the Boulevard hills, also Peachtree street and almost every part of the city is in perfect view. The East Tennessee shops are nearby and we are reliably informed that very soon the force will be doubled, and now a house can hardly be had in the neighborhood, so a great demand for additional houses to rent to good paying tenants will soon be upon that section of the city, and besides this, the glass works are now in operation, and 100 employes from these works will want houses. Now these are facts examine for yourselves and see if there will not be more demand for comfortable cottages where good mechanics can live in close proximity to their work and who get wages that will authorize them to pay a fair rent and meet it promptly, in that section than any other in the city.

Go out and look at these lots. While there step in just across the street and see the new glass works in full blast, looking like a bee hive, giving employment to so many new comers, besides a number of boys around the city there busy doing the light work. Their fathers and mothers must have homes near by. Get a plat, attend our sale and buy a lot. Take special cars at 2:40 at Gate City National Bank building.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

Stocks as Reported at the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, May 14.—The stock market, as usual on Saturdays, was much duller than on the preceding days, and notwithstanding a firm undertone was rather heavy throughout most of the day. Under the expectation of an unfavorable bank statement the sentiment among traders in the forenoon was bearish, and realizations from that source sagged prices off throughout the forenoon. After the issue of the statement and the decrease in the surplus reserve was found to be merely a nominal amount, there was an effort to get back the stock put out in the morning, and the general line of the market underwent a marked improvement. There was no disposition shown by investors or larger operators to market or to manipulate stocks in which they are interested, and the bulk of the transactions was confined to the element first mentioned. Fluctuations in the general list were in but a few cases of special importance, the more marked advances or declines occurring in inactive stocks. The features of trading were Norfolk and Western stocks, Manitoba Quicksilvers and Central Iowa, all of which scored marked advances. The opening was firm and active, but prices receded immediately, the declines ranging up to ¾ per cent. [illegible] ally the market became dull and soon became again heavy. This afternoon, however, there was an increased trading, accompanied by a firmer tone in the general list and marked strength in a few specialties, conspicuous among which was Norfolk and Western. There was some sagging in the last hour and the close was quiet and rather heavy at the figures. The business of the day foots up 217,000 shares. The active list shows irregular changes in which declines predominate, although in a few cases only are the differences for more than fractional amounts.

Exchange dull but steady at 486½@488¼. Money easy at 3½@5, closing offered at 4. Subtreasury balances: Coin $134,721,000; currency $15,451,000. Governments dull but steady; 4s 129; 3s 100. State bonds dull but steady.

NEW YORK, May 14—C. L. Green & Co., in their report on cotton futures today, say: It has been a stupid and uneventful day and entirely without feature of significance, except to revolt the general absence of interest in the situation at the moment. The short interest seems to be pretty well weeded out, and the long element seeks in vain for something that will give them a lift, but neither foreign or domestic advice was propitious, and matters simply drag along awaiting developments. At the close rates were a shade above last evening, but everything very slow and quotations somewhat nominal.

NEW YORK, May 14—The total visible supply of cotton for the world is 2,386,024 bales, of which 1,636,724 bales are American, against 2,358,295 bales and 1,834,195 bales respectively last year. Receipts at all interior towns 6,236 bales. Receipts from plantations 13,683 bales. Crop in sight 6,254,146 bales.

THE CHICAGO MARKET,

Features of the Speculative Movement in Grain and Produce.

Special to The Constitution.

CHICAGO, May 14—The wheat market opened at 86⅛c for June, and for some minutes fluctuated between 86⅜ and 86⅛c, and then took an upward shoot to 86⅞c on a little show of buying by the clique brokers. In the meantime long futures were pretty weak. August opened at 83¾c and sold down to 83¼c. As the session advanced business became duller and duller. There were no orders from the outside, and the whole day's transactions were practically between brokers. The clique did very little after the first hour, and values consequently moved up and down with great speed. June wheat sold early as low as 86⅛c and as high as 86⅞c, but the later transactions were between 86⅜@86⅛c. The clique did get much wheat when June option got up to 86⅞c, and prices were accordingly allowed to ease off. The crowd was indisposed to do business to any great extent, and the tactics of yesterday failed to work. It was an easy matter for the clique to get wheat yesterday, and the weaker the market the more the crowd were disposed to sell, but the last five minutes of the afternoon, when prices were run up ⅛c, had frightened the bearishly inclined, and they were afraid to go short of the market. Just before the close at 1 o'clock Irwin Green came and bought June wheat frely. The crowd got very nervous, and all, or nearly all, of the shorts commenced covering, and June wheat was run up to 87c, where it closed.

Corn opened rather easier than yesterday's close, July started ⅛c lower at 41c, and held steady around 40⅞@41. Several times it broke to 40⅝c during the morning, but good buying invariably brought it back again to 40⅞c, at which figure it closed.

Provisions were dull and weak all day, though the opening prices were a shade stronger than yesterday. July lard sold from 6.72½ down to 6.62½, and July ribs down to 7.12½. There was no unusual selling, but all hog product broke from its own weight. Both, however, recovered somewhat toward the close, July ribs closing at 7.17½ and July lard at 6.75.

The following was the range in the leading futures in Chicago today:

BAKER & WOOLMAN,

THE CONSTITUTION.

THROUGH THE CITY.

Pavement Paragraphs Caught on the Run by the Constitution Reporters.

NO COURTS SITTING.—Yesterday was an off day in the county courthouse. Not a single court was in session.

NEW SWITZERLAND.—This place of resort, Julius Hartman, proprietor, is now open. It is but a short distance from Grant park and all visitors to the park are invited to visit it.

WELL AGAIN.—Judge Hall, who was taken sick in the superior court last Friday, has almost recovered from the attack. He expects to be able to appear in court tomorrow morning.

CHILDREN IN THE WOODS.—Yesterday two parties of school children enjoyed a picnic frolic in the woods near Ponce de Leon, and several other parties of little folk had a delightful day at Grant park.

TATE SPRING.—Eleven states now well represented at Tate Spring, Tenn., Georgia and Alabama taking the lead. The water is considered to be the best, which is being shipped daily to all parts of the country. Write for pamphlet.

LADIES' AUXILLIARY.—The Ladies' Auxilliary of the Y. M. C. will meet in the association parlor Monday evening, May 16th, at 5 o'clock sharp. Business of importance will be presented.

ORDINATION.—Bishop Beckwith will ordain Mr. Barnwell, of Columbus, to the disconate this morning at St. Luke's cathedral. On this account Rev. Mr. Barrett will preach an ordination sermon, and not the sermon announced last Sunday.

IMMENSE PICNIC.—It is estimated that not less than three thousand colored people attended the picnic yesterday at Silver spring. In the afternoon the street cars were taxed to their utmost capacity in bringing the excursionists back to the city.

COLONEL TOWERS'S CONDITION.—A telegram received by his son, Mr. John Towers, contains the information that Colonel Towers, principal keeper of the penitentiary, is no better and does not improve nearly as rapidly as had been hoped. Mr. Towers left for Rome yesterday morning.

PROFESSOR WURM'S BAND AT GRANT PARK.—Concerts Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7 to 10 p. m., and Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from 4 to 7 p. m. Cars now run to the park every fifteen minutes. Next week there will be a car to the park every seven and a half minutes.

HE WAS DISCHARGED.—G. W. McAlpin, of Haralson county, was brought to the city by Deputy Marshal Rowe, yesterday, and was arraigned before Commissioner Haight, to answer to a charge of distilling. The proof against him was not sufficient to warrant his being held and he was discharged.

AGAIN IN HIS PULPIT.—Dr. McDonald, pastor of the Second Baptist church, has returned from the Southern Baptist convention at Louisville, Ky., and will occupy his pulpit this morning and tonight. The services at night will be evangelical, and Dr. McDonald will be assisted by several efficient workers.

IN HONOR OF JUDGE EZZARD.—The committee of the Atlanta bar, which was charged with drawing up a tribute to the memory of Judge William Ezzard, yesterday submitted a report. The paper describes the dead jurist and extols his high qualities. It is beautifully written, and is signed by N. J. Hammond, John Collier, Milton A. Candler, William H. Hulsey and W. L. Calhoun. Judge Marshall J. Clarke ordered that the memorial paper be entered upon the minutes of the superior court.

CHARGED WITH HORSE STEALING.—A dispatch was received at the executive department yesterday, from the private secretary of Governor Richardson, of South Carolina, notifying Governor Gordon that requisition papers are on their way to Atlanta for David Dicks, now in Richmond county jail. Dicks is wanted in South Carolina to answer to a charge of horse stealing. Governor Richardson asks that the prisoner be ordered held until the executive warrant for his extradition can be issued.

THE WEEK AT SPELMAN SEMINARY.—There will be interesting exercises at Spelman seminary tomorrow, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Tomorrow afternoon there will be a reception to the graduating class. Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock the examination and exhibition of the music classes will occur. Wednesday evening Dr. J. B. Hawthorne will deliver an address. Thursday the commencement will take place. There will on that day be exercises by the Atlanta Baptist and Spelman seminaries. The address by the graduates will be made by Professor W. F. Slaton in Friendship Baptist church. The public is cordially invited to attend these exercises.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—The many friends of Miss Carrie Ward Matthews, of West End, will be pained to know that she was the victim, a few nights ago, to a most painful and serious accident. She was attending a moonlight picnic when her foot turned and her left ankle received a very bad sprain. She has been most tenderly cared for, however, and while she will be unable to walk for several months, except with crutches, she is improving slowly. She is to appear next Tuesday evening in concert at DeGive's with the Polymnia club, and will play two duets with her master, Mr. Alfredo Barili. Her accident will not in any way interfere with her playing. She has the sympathy of a thousand friends who wish her a speedy recovery.

A PLEASANT ENTERTAINMENT.—One of the most pleasant rainbow parties of the season was held at Mrs. Bell's, on North Pryor street, last night. Dancing was carried on until a late hour, after which the young gentlemen proceeded to hem the young ladies' aprons for the prize, which was a gold-headed walking cane. Mr. Robert Bruce was the successful one. The following young ladies and gentlemen were present: Misses Flora Shaw, Adelaide Youngblood, Emma Lou Youngblood, Lizzie Lovejoy, Mamie Bruce, Erhel Richmond, Alice Haltiwanger, Bertie Douglass, Ethel Harris. The young gentlemen were Messrs. Richard Bell, Burt Lovejoy, Eugene Black, Henry Grady, Robert Bruce, Tucker Smith, Walter Kirkpatrick, Peyton Douglass, Jim Powers.

THE POLYMNIA CONCERT.—As has been already announced, the grand concert next Tuesday evening at the opera house will be one of the events of the season. With such talent as the Polymnia club, directed by Mr. Alfredo Barili, Miss Jessie Hardeman, Miss Carrie Ward Matthews, Mrs. Alfredo Barili, Mr. Samuel P. Snow and Mr. Fred. Wedemeyer, there could be nothing but a charming programme presented. Music softens the heart, elevates our aspirations and ennobles the soul; and we have now offered us a rare opportunity to enjoy these benefits for ourselves, and at the same time contribute a mite to a very important and useful institution in our city. The recent large additions to the size and the comforts of the Ivy Street Hospital are not yet entirely paid for, and as one of the means of raising a fund for this purpose, a concert has been arranged to take place as above mentioned. No argument need now be presented in behalf of this hospital, which is certainly doing a good work for the afflicted poor in Atlanta. It certainly deserves the sympathy and aid of our citizens. Let every body who has a heart to help in a noble cause, come out and attend this concert. Let the children go, let all the mothers go, and let those who are unable to attend buy tickets, and thus help in the good work. The programme for this occasion, it is believed, will surpass anything that has ever occurred in Atlanta. Professor Barili, aided by Miss Hartman, of Macon, a lady of rare musical talent, and forty young lady artists, will conduct the exercises. Tickets to this grand concert will be only fifty cents, and may be had at Miller's book store, under the opera house, at Wilson & Bruckner's, Phillips & Crew's old stand, or at the door on the night of the entertainment. Parties desiring reserved seats should call at Miller's book store at once and secure tickets for the same, without extra charge.

YES, THE GUARD WILL GO!

The Tour Will Certainly be Made--Modification of the Original Programme.

The members of the Gate City Guard are determined to make the trip to Europe, the British government to the contrary notwithstanding.

The original programme as mapped out months ago by Captain Burke cannot, under the new order of things, be adhered to. The tour will have to be shortened considerably. Instead of lasting sixty days it will not exceed thirty-five.

The present arrangement, that is the project which is advocated almost unanimously, contemplates ignoring England entirely. The members of the company will not touch British soil.

The details of the modified tour have not yet been fully agreed upon; the only point which is irrevocably settled, is that the Gate City Guard will go to Europe. Nearly thirty members have paid their passage money in full, each member's quota being $110. It has been ascertained that should the Guard determine to abandon the trip, that only a small part of this money could be recovered. As soon as this fact was established, the members resolved that they would not lose this money, but that they would make the tour, or a part of it, at all hazards.

The general opinion among the boys is that England must be ignored and treated with contempt, and that under no circumstances must any of them visit that country, either as soldiers or citizens. A committee was at work all yesterday raising subscriptions among the citizens of Atlanta. It is understood they met with some encouragement.

Captain Burke has been using the wires freely and up to last night had made good progress in modifying the details of the projected trip. He has not yet succeeded in removing all the difficulties, but hopes to overcome every obstacle in a few days.

Monday night there will be a very important meeting of the members of the Guard at their armory. Every member is earnestly requested to be present so as to give his counsel in this critical period of the company's existence.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Convocation of the Grand Commandery in Atlanta Next Wednesday.

The members of the various lodges of the Knights Templar throughout Georgia will assemble in their annual convention next Wednesday in Masonic temple, in this city. The gathering promises to be a large and interesting one. There will be a delegation of 30 from Savannah, 25 from Macon, 15 from Columbus, 25 from Augusta, and smaller delegations from other towns. About 25 will come from Charleston, S. C. The delegates will make the Kimball house their headquarters while in Atlanta. The visitors will be most hospitably entertained by the members of the Atlanta commandery. Several parties of ladies will come from Charleston, Augusta, Macon, Savannah and Columbus.

The exercises will be held in Masonic temple, the meeting occurring at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. At 9:30 o'clock the delegates, in full uniform, will meet in front of the Kimball house and march to the place of meeting.

Wednesday night the usual services, beautiful and impressive, will occur and the public is invited to attend them. On this occasion Sir Knight Samuel Bradley will conduct the music, which he promises will be very fine.

The session will probably continue till Thursday night.

A GRAND AFFAIR.

Arrangements for the Interstate Agricultural Convention Being Perfected.

The arrangements for the Interstate agricultural convention, to be held at Atlanta, beginning on August 16th, are being completed as rapidly as possible.

A meeting of the executive committee was held yesterday, and several sub-committees were appointed to look into the matter of railroad rates, accommodations and so forth. It was decided to again write to the governors of those states from which no response has been received, and to urge upon them the necessity of immediate action. So far six States have been heard from. Communications have been received from Governor Scales of North Carolina, Governor Ross of Texas, Governor Perry of Florida, Governor McEncry of Louisiana, and Governor Taylor of Tennessee. All of these gentlemen have indorsed the project and promise their hearty co operation. Several have already appointed their delegates.

The states which have not been heard from are Alabama, South Carolina, Mississippi and Arkansas. It is confidently expected that these states will also be represented and that the convention will be one of the most notable affairs of its kind that this country has ever seen.

Of Interest to Printers and Publishers.

A representative of THE CONSTITUTION called last week at the Printers' Supply Depot of Mr. Dodson in his new quarters, 29 South Broad street, and confesses to great surprise at the size of the stock carried and the magnitude of business reported. Mr. Dodson informs us that he has for two years been badly cramped for room, and has had his stock limited by the capacity of the building he occupied, but in his new and elegant quarters, (a picture of which appears in this issue of THE CONSTITUTION,) he will carry a stock of type, presses and other printing material large enough to meet all the demands of his rapidly growing trade. As Mr. Dodson guarantees to duplicate the prices of any type foundry in the United States and furnish the goods in Atlanta, we cannot see why he should not command the trade of southern printers and publishers. THE CONSTITUTION has set the example by giving him the order for an entire new outfit, and suggests to its brethren of the press to do likewise. Dodson wishes us to say that his latch string is always on the outside, and printers and publishers visiting Atlanta are cordially invited to call and see him and to make his place their headquarters during their stay in the city.

NEW SWITZERLAND.

A Place of Loveliness Near Grant Park.

A visit to Grant park without going to see New Switzerland would be like a visit to Europe without going to Rome or London. New Switzerland is an ideal home, a place of entertainment, beautiful garden spot, and will in a few years be the most attractive place near Atlanta. It is the property of Mr. Julius Hartman, well known in the city, and the idea is his own. He is a native of Germany and the free customs and lovely homes and gardens of his native land still have a green spot in his memory. With the view of giving something that would be as near as possible like the gardens of Germany he has leased a portion of ground within a stone's throw of Grant park, and has constructed an open platform, surrounded, however, by trees in such a manner that it is cooler and brighter and pleasanter than any pavilion. Near the platform is a flower garden with a half dozen springs here and there in it. Four different kinds of water are furnished, and the entire surroundings are such as are pleasing to one who wishes quiet and rest.

Mr. Hartman will raise strawberries, all kinds of vegetables and chickens. In his chicken yards he now has several hundred Plymouth Rocks, Langshans and Wyandottes. He is always ready to show any one over his grounds, and will furnish refreshments at all times. The place is indeed a spot of loveliness, almost enchanted it seems, and visitors to Grant park should by all means go to Little Switzerland. To Germans Mr. Hartman's is a homelike place, and he will no doubt be overrun during the season with visitors.

The Wall Paper Leader.

J. T. White, our leading wall paper and shade dealer, is still at the front. He has papered more rooms in Atlanta this week than was ever done before in this city in the same time. His paper hangers are the best. The Markham House company, pleased with his work, has added a number of additional rooms to his large contract with them. He refers, by permission, to all of our leading architects as to the character of his work, and to a host of customers. His stock of wall paper may not be the largest in the city, for he sells it; but he receives new goods every week. If you want first-class paper hanging, call on him at 16 Whitehall street. He has also the largest stock of shades in the city, which he is closing out at half price. Shades on spring rollers at 45 cents each.

Jubilee Service.

One of the most charming church edifices in the south is the unique Park street church, West End. The interior is peculiarly attractive. The members feel profoundly thankful to God for their church, and this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock they will celebrate their second anniversary. The sermon will be preached by one of the most eloquent divines of the Methodist church. Rev. David Sullins, D. D., has an acknowledged reputation that places him high among preachers of the gospel. He is a man of fine intellect, and his fancy is so natural and beautiful as to make every sweep of his imagination real to the hearer. His sermon will be a great treat to all who are so fortunate as to hear him. The church will arrange additional seats to accommodate those from the city. The music will be of high order. The choir of Trinity church has kindly consented to lead the singing.

All friends are cordially invited to enjoy the sermon, and to rejoice with the congregation. Extra chairs have been provided for the occasion. The usual sermons at 11 a. m., and 7:45 p. m., have been dispensed with, in order that all may be present at the anniversary service at 3:30 p. m.

THE SOUTH SIDE.

WHAT STREET CARS AND GRANT PARK HAVE DONE.

The Sale by The Capital City Land and Improvement Company—Houses Offered on Easy Terms—The Location the Most Desirable in the City—The Date of the Sale, Etc.

There is no part of the city that has made such decided progress in building, general improvement and street paving and curbing in the past year as has the south side. Street cars have been run out the streets until the entire south end is almost honeycombed with them, and Grant park has been improved until it is now one of the most popular resorts in the city.

There and other improvements have made a decided increase in the value of real estate. Pryor and Washington streets, Capitol avenue and Georgia avenue are the most popular streets of the south side, and upon these there is now very few lots that can be bought at any price. The owners are alive to the real worth of the property, and are very wisely buying and holding their real estate. It is estimated by the best agents in the city that the increase in value of this property has been greater in proportion to its cost than any property in the city.

The residents of this side are all greatly interested in the mutual benefits that are to be derived from the increase, and all are working to enhance the value of their property. The Capital City Land Improvement company have now twenty-nine lots centrally located and the most desirable vacant property on these streets, which they have decided to offer at auction on Wednesday, the 25th inst. The lots are large, level and beautifully located. Street cars run right by the door, which will carry you either to your business in the city or to Grant park for recreation. Curbing and paving are out all the streets, and there is neither mud nor dust to cause trouble and annoyance. In fact, for residences there is not a portion of the city that offers the manifold advantages that does the south side. These lots will be sold without exception to the highest bidder, and the company will accept their stock at a premium of 20 per cent in payment. The best offer, though, that they make is to persons buying, who wish to build houses. Their offer to this class is this: The company will lend the money to build the house at 8 per cent interest, and let it be repaid in installments to suit the borrower. If this is not an offer that should make every person who does not own a home resolve to buy one, it is hard to imagine an offer that would move the person.

It is in the possession of the population of a city that adds strength and desirability to the city. Give Atlanta a population of 65,000, and let the majority of her people own their homes, and you will have a city that will come bravely out of any panic that may present itself. This is what the Capital City Land and Improvement company propose to do. They are offering to sell the most desirable vacant property, either for speculation or for residences in the city, and in a way that all who wish to do so, can purchase. The lots will attract the attention of all, and the sale will be largely attended. It is one important alike to speculators and to men who wish to buy homes, and as such lots are seldom offered at auction it is an opportunity that presents itself but few times in the history of a city.

IMPORTANT SALE.

East Sheffield Property at Auction—An Advantage Presented for Investment.

Beginning June the 9th Colonel George W. Adair will sell at auction the lands of the East Sheffield Land company, the lands, consisting of twelve hundred acres, lie beautifully, are specially adapted for residences of those engaged in business at Sheffield, and also most suitable for manufacturing sites. The lots are all 50 feet front, and most of them 215 feet deep, running back to a 20 feet alley. The lots of less size are all 200 feet deep. The streets run due east and west and are 60 and 80 feet wide. The avenues run due north and south, and some are 80 feet and others 100 feet, and one 150 feet wide. Along this 150 feet avenue a street car line is in operation from Tuscumbia to the Sheffield lands.

Sheffield is situated in Colbert county, Alabama, and about sixteen miles south from the Tennessee state line, on the south side of the Tennessee river. It is midway, as the crows fly, between the towns of Florence and Tuscumbia. Each of these towns contain about two thousand people, and is blessed with good schools, good health, and an intelligent citizenship. They are distant from each other by the "dirt road" about five miles. It is on a high bluff, at the head of navigation, on the south bank of the Tenhessee river, which connects with the Ohio and Mississippi rivers and their numerous and important tributaries. Sheffield is seven hundred miles nearer, by water, to St. Louis, Mo., than is Pittsburg, Pa., to St. Louis by water.

Pure and wholesome water is easily and cheaply obtained. The soil is of such nature that durable cisterns can be economically constructed, and wells from fifty to seventy feet reach bold and abundant streams, while the waterworks supply water from the river in erlaustless abundance. The waterworks at Sheffield afford an ample supply for a city of 15,000 people, and the water being entirely free from limestone is peculiarly well adapted for use in engines and boilers.

The above gives a good idea of the desirability of the lands, and the sale will probably attract more attention than any sale that has taken place in the south during the present year.

Now is your time. E. W. McNeal will paper and paint your houses cheap for the next fifteen days. Call and see him. 13 N. Broad St. E. W. McNeal. Telephone No. 777.

Members of the Gate City Guard should be sure and attend the meeting Monday night. Let no member who feels an interest in the company fail to attend the meeting.

Spelman Seminary.

Thursday, May 12th, was class day, and many friends lent the encouragement of their presence at the exercises. From 9 a. m. to 12 m. examinations were going on in the various class-rooms. In the evening the class of '89, who take certificates this year in the elementary normal course, gave an entertainment consisting of essays and recitations to a highly appreciative audience. The exercises were varied with singing by the school, under the direction of Professor Kruger. The songs were finely rendered, testifying to the untiring labors of the professor no less than his rare excellence as a musician. The examinations continued through Friday, and several distinguished guests were present. On Monday examination will be continued. The commencement exercises will occur on Thursday, the 19th instant.

Much talk has been indulged in regarding the death of the "Scalper" from the effects of too much "interstate"—(Chestnuts). As such reports originated from "common carriers" with a view of "unjust discrimination" against the aforesaid "Scalper," and as a member of that much talked of fraternity, I arise to correct same. The "Scalper" is not dead; he liveth and kicketh, but not high, and I am yet prepared to furnish railroad and steamship tickets to all points by land or sea, at rates that are "reasonable and just." I do not wish any "undue or unreasonable preferences" of the public in matters of "transportation," but I wish it to be clearly understood I can still furnish a "longer haul for shorter" money than any one "engaged in a like and similar business." Yours, Harry Lynan, 30 Wall street.

Choice West End Lots

I will sell upon the premises on TUESDAY, 24th MAY, at four o'clock in the afternoon, 9 BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE LOTS, situated on Gordon and Lee streets, in West End.

These lots all lay beautifully, front on street car line, have brick sidewalks and are near the academy and churches.

It is unnecessary to comment on West End. There is more improvement actually going on now in that beautiful little town than in any other part of Fulton county the same size. Is approached by two excellent street car lines, accommodation trains and good streets and sidewalks.

Each lot will be sold on its merit. Terms, one-third cash, balance one and two years, 8 per cent

Pryor Street.

Atlanta society is crystalizing and certain streets are becoming the residence thoroughfares. Peachtree street has long had the lead; Washington and Capitol avenue have ranked up. Now Pryor is assuming the role of a first class residence street. Starting out from the center of the city, immediately from the passenger carshed and the Kimball house, and being a straight, continuous street, give it advantages not possessed by any other unless it be Peachtree. There are no colored settlements on or near Pryor street for the whole length, and with street car line made direct, which is now being put down, old Pryor can justly claim to be the residence street of the south side.

STORIES OF THE WAR.

AN INTERESTING STORY OF OLD MAN PLUNKET.

How Old Man Brown Got Away With the Conscript Offerv. In His Mind—A Lady Tells of How the People Dressed in War Times. —Interesting Incidents, Etc., Etc.

Written for The Constitution.

"Thar was no soldier," said old man Plunket, "what wanted to get killed in er skirmish er die in er hospital. But er lots of 'em died in hospitals and I remember er young Texas fellow what the doctors tried mighty hard to save, and I think his name was Crawford.

"This young Texian was shot through the thigh, and the thigh bone war shivered, and the doctors told him thar warn't much chance for him lessen he had his leg cut off, and they told him then it would have to be cut mighty close up to his body, and that the chances war all erginst him. He told 'em to whack it off, and do the best they could and he thought he could pull through. The doctors put him on er table and they soon had his leg off, just as close up as they could get it and then they got him back on his bunk and it warn't long before he was as pert as er cricket and crackin' jokes with the fellows what war laying next to him; and it went erlong that way for five or six days, when somehow he took er backset and his wound all got inflamed and the doctors got to comin' to see him every hour or two, and we all knowed, and he knowed too, that something was up; and he 'lowed that if he had to die from that wound he'd rather to have been killed on the spot, and then it would er been over with; but,' said he, 'thar's no use in grievin' erbout what can't be helped, so let us have as good er time as we can while I do live.' And from that he took it easy ergin and cracked his little jokes and laughed every chance he got, but erbout twelve o'clock one day, when the nurse was givin' him er little soup, he moved himself and the blood spurted erway out offen the bed, and the nurse called the doctor what was at the other end of the house, and he run up and took er little instrument what he had and caught up the artery and sent for other doctors, and pretty soon thar war four or five of 'em erround the young Texian and they done all they could to tie the artery, but they couldn't, and they shook their heads and he seed 'em, and he lowed that if they couldn't do nothin' for him, all right, and so all the doctors but the one what was holdin' to the tweezers passed erlong out, and then this doctor told the young Texian that he was bound to die; that they couldn't do nothin' for him, and that as soon as the tweezers war took off he'd bleed to death. The young Texian said all right, but axed him to hold it till he looked at some pictures what he had with him, and he took the pictures and looked at 'em one by one, and then he took all three of 'em and held 'em up before him er minit and then he kissed 'em and 'lowed 'good bye to all' and hugged the pictures up in one arm on his breast and with the other hand pulled the sheet over his face and the tweezers slipped off, and we all turned erway and didn't go back any more till er litter come in to carry him out to the dead house. Wars er bad thing, wars er bad thing."

After a pause of a few minutes old man Plunket continued:

"Country boys couldn't stand soldierin' as well as town boys. Er great big country fellow what could swing er ax all day and turn out his 250 rails from the stump, and out run, outjump, or throw down arry town fellow you'd bring before him, when it come to camp life warnt thar, and er little old weasly town fellow what never had er blister in his hand in his life would be prancin' er round like er young filly when the country fellow could hardly drag one foot before the other. But all of 'em had to give up sometimes and go to the hospitals, and the man what haint seen the sufferin' in er hospital don't know nothin' erbout war."

* * * * * * *

"Whatever Plunkett tells you, you can depend on stranger," said old man Brown, as he took a fresh chew of tobacco. "Hospitals are bad things, and if I had it to go over ergin I'd lay in er cave till moss on my back was three foot long 'fore I'd ever go inside er one."

"You see, stranger," continued old man Brown, "it took er ding sharp man to keep outen the war, if I do say it myself."

"The conscript officers kept er comin' and er comin' and gittin er little higher and higher in what they called their scale of ages, till one day the old 'oman 'lowed I'd better get er little allin; she thought I was too healthy for the times, and it was her opinion that the age business would play out altogether, providin' you could tote a gun. So the first thing you know my back was in such er bad fix that I couldn't move er chair from one side er the fireplace to the other, and it was soon norated all over the settlement that 'Brown's er plum invalid, and some lowed it was spinal affection, and some lowed it was liftin' too much when I was young, and some lowed one thing and some ernother, but me and the old 'oman and the gals knowed what it was.

"Shure enough, it warn't long 'fore the conscript went up to my age, and then me and my folks smiled. But one night I was walkin' down in the new ground back er the lot and it was jest gettin dark and I didn't think thar was er soul erround any whar and I seed er big hickory log layin'on the ground, and thinks I to myself that'll make a good fire for tonight, and up I picked it and started for the house with it on my shoulder, when just as I turned erround the corner of the crib er voice right at me lowed:

"'Good evening, Mr. Brown.'

"You oughter seed that log drap, and I lowed 'oh, my back, my poor back.'

"'I'm an officer, Mr. Brown, and you must go up and be examined,' said the fellow.

"I went, and the board of doctors thumped me, and put thar ears down on me and listened like, and looked at my tongue and axed me how I felt, and I just lowed oh, my back, my poor back!"

"The board of doctors sent me over to er hospital and lowed that they would have me treated for er few days and then they'd zamon me ergin.

"When I got over to the hospital they give me er bunk to lie on, and I lay there pretty well, 'ceptin' once and erwhile er pain would catch me in the back and I'd low: Oh! my back, my poor back.

"Next mornin' round comes one er these here weasly little old doctors, and he axed me how I felt, and I lowed, oh, my back, my poor back! The little old doctor he looked at the nurse what was with him and they both smiled and passed on down the room and zamoned the other fellows erlong, and I begin to think I was gittin' erlong right well, and that they warn't er gwyne to thump erround me any more, but when they went all erround the room I seed 'em stop over on the other side er the room and look at me and talk kinder low and thinks I to myself, som'things up, but I just turned over and lowed, oh, my back, my poor back.

"Shure enough soon up steps the little old weasly [illegible] stood by my bunk er minit, and by [illegible] nurse he come up with er little table with some things what they called 'cups', and the doctor lowed:

"'Turn over, we're gwyne to cup your poor, poor back.'

"Then the nurse he poured some spirits er turpentine in the cups—or somethin' that burned the same as turpentine, and they had me layin' over by this time, and the nurse he handed the ding little old weasly doctor one er the cups and he struck er match and lit the turpentine in the cup and turned it right down on the small er my back.

"Jerusalem! I rise from thar and the nurse he grabbed me, and I swung him up in the air, when three or four more nurses runs up and takes leg-hold on me, and every other holt they could get, and er nigger er two run up and helped 'em, and pretty soon they had me down, my arms tied and my legs tied and er bayonet tied ercross my mouth, and they flung me upon the little old bunk and turned me over, and that ding little old doctor set twelve of them cups er fire and put six of 'em on one side of my backbone and the other six on t'other side and turned erround and walked off. I was fixed. The nurse he took the cups off after they'd burned my back up and went and got er little trick and touched er spring and seventy-five or eighty knives went right into them blisters and he called that scarifyin!

"Well, I've hated hospitals and doctors from that day to this, and I always expect to."

How We Dressed During the War.

Written for The Constitution.

At the beginning of the late civil war almost every one who moved in a respectable circle in social life had a decent stock of individual clothing on hand. But as the four long years of conflict dragged themselves along, this stock became sadly and perceptibly diminished.

Owing to the blockade, and to the fact that the south was not a manufacturing section, store-goods soon became difficult to obtain. The merchants' shelves soon became thinned, and goods which had lain upon them for years back found a ready sale. Then it was that sutlers came into demand, and their small wares were eagerly sought after by the female portion of the community.

Fortunately we had cotton and wool in the raw, and factories for their manufacture into woolen and cotton cloth sprang up at every available point. Very much of their produce, however, was necessarily reserved for the uses of the army.

Children and young people who were growing every day found it difficult to restrain themselves within the compass of half-worn and out-grown garments. The wit of woman, ever keenest in emergency, was set to work to remedy these deficiencies, and the problem of the art of "stretching" was carried to its greatest height.

The family to which I belonged was a family of refuges, and the first consideration as winter drew on was how to keep warm. Comforters made of coarse calico or old silk dresses and lined with raw cotton were our first achievement.

Shoes came next on the list. Fortunately there was a tannery in the village, and by paying down hard money we were duly shod in stout calf-skin. Later on sheep-skin and alligator skin were pressed into service. At home we wore cloth shoes or crocheted slippers, fastened on to the soles of discarded shoes.

Fancy the amount of cotton cloth necessary to cover the nakedness of a household of eight females, three males and several servants! At first we had resort to the linen sheeting of happier days! Later on we were glad to obtain unbleached muslin, no matter how inferior the quality.

As the war went on, prices advanced frightfully, owing to the scarcity of goods and the depreciation of the currency.

Very early in the struggle the shadow fell. A brother, the eldest born, lay with the unsheeted dead at Manassas. My first mourning was very simple—a dyed merino, a black dotted calico, a black ribbon round my white child's hat, voila tout.

Once in the year my father went to Richmond, 250 miles distant, and brought home such commodities as his slender purse could purchase; a calico dress apiece, mayhap a woolen shawl, a little tea, sugar, coffee, rice, etc.

I went through the war on four calico dresses and when I close my eyes I can see those calicoes yet. They were all polka-dotted, and ranged from 45 cents a yard all the way up to $10.

As our exigencies increased two dresses were merged into one. Prior to the war, a twin sister and myself had always dressed exactly alike. We now exchanged, and out of two half-worn dresses evolved one whole garment.

Garibaldi waists were very popular. They were made out of silk, cloth, velvet or muslin, and worn with any kind of skirt, bright or dark as might be.

I remember a black velvet jacket, cut from a mantle, which was worn by five girls in turn, and did service on many trying occasions. It figured on horseback, in the parlor, at state receptions—in short, everywhere. My mother sacrificed her black brocaded silk to the wants of her young daughters. It fashioned a garibaldi around.

Pretty suits were made out of all wool, linsey and checked cotton of domestic weaving.

But alas! for the prospective bride in war time. To amass a trousseau was a matter of almost super-human effort. A friend who married in the winter of '62 was made happy by the gift of her mother's store of table and bed linen. These were duly converted into underwear, finished off with hand embroidery. A mauve velvet bonnet, and brown silk, shot with gold, procured in Richmond, completed her outfit.

Mourning was still more difficult to procure. A young widow who lost her husband in '64 gave me a cluny silk and figured lawn in exchange for my much worn black merino and grenadine shawl.

Sutlers were very popular. They always carried a stock of small wares, such as pins, needles, tape, buttons, and other household articles. Sometimes cotton gloves and coarse shoes. Thread was hoarded carefully. We bought it in large hanks, manufactured from hemp.

Pin cushions were ripped up, and many invaluable little prickers extracted from their branny depths.

Almost every article of wear was devised by woman's skillful hands—cloth was fashioned into caps, gloves, jackets, shoes, etc.; the fleece of the sheep was in great demand; and out of the spun yarn, socks, shirts, skirts, and other articles too numerous to mention were knit by woman's deft hand. I remember a lovely jacket, crocheted of dark, brown yarn, finished off with red worsted, which was as becoming to the slender form it encased as it was in reality snug and comfortable. Hoods, comforters, smoking caps, sacques and shawls, knit from yarn, contributed not a little to our comfort during the winter season. For summer wear, we had straw hats of domestic plaiting, dyed black, varnished, and made gay with a bright ribbon twined around the crown.

We did not change our fashions during the war, although on one occasion I recall a lady who returned from the capital sporting a hoop-skirt about three feet in diameter.

It was impossible to purchase wraps or cloaks, so we were forced to remodel those we had. There was a general resurrection of antiquated garments, and no one knew how rich she was until the garret had been thoroughly overhauled and its hidden treasures brought to light.

Ripping, turning, sponging, pressing, accomplished wonders with many a moth-eaten and discarded garment of other days. We cut out and devised our own stockings. No one was particular about the fit of a pair of new shoes.

It would be impossible to enumerate, in a limited space, the thousand and one devices which the wit and ingenuity of woman lent to our ever narrowing resources, during the four years of civil war. Doubtless there was some relief when the long strain was over and the stores on the other side of Mason and Dixon's line were again thrown open to our needs and ur purses.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

A Glance Over the Literary Field—Briefs About Books—News and Notes.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for May is not less "journalistic" than usual. It opens with an article by General Tecumseh Sherman, which is in some sort a review of General Lord Wolseley's recent estimate of the character and military achievements of General Robert E. Lee. We need not characterize this queer article further than to say that it is utterly impossible for a man of General Sherman's peculiar mental and moral qualities to appreciate or even understand the character of Robert Lee. It is impossible that the man who pursued women and children and noncombatants with fire and sword should comprehend the greatness and the humanity of the man who issued the Chambersburg order to his army. One revels in brutalities of his own invention; the other touches the high level of the humanities.

General Sherman need not attempt to cut capers as the muse of history. His opinions are worth what editors will pay for them and nothing more. There is no doubt that General Grant was a great military man, nor is there any doubt about the genius of General Thomas. But General Lee was a great military man and something more besides. He possessed that perfectly proportioned character that is the basis of moral greatness, and he stands out among his contemporaries not only as a soldier but as a typical American citizen. Compared with him in this respect, General Sherman is remarkable only for his insignificance.

General Sherman's article is the chief attraction of the number. There is also some degree of interest in the article that follows, entitled "My Public Life." In the table of contents this article is credited to "President Garfield," and the impression is made on the reader that it was written by Garfield. As a matter of fact it is a report of an interview with Garfield by the writer who signs himself Edmund Kirke. The article of the greatest current interest in the number is by John Boyle O'Reilly, and is entitled "The Coercion Bill."

Briefs About Books.

SAM JONES'S OWN BOOK, published by Cranston & Stowe, Cincinnati, is a handsome volume of 550 pages, containing an autobiography and a portrait of the popular Georgia evangelist, with authorized stenographic reports of his sermons and sayings. The admirers of Sam Jones should take notice that this is the only authorized edition of his sermons. The readers of THE CONSTITUTION are already acquainted with the merits of this book. Thousands of them have heard Sam Jones, and other thousands have laughed and wept over his characteristic utterances. The book is selling rapidly.

ZURY: THE MEANEST MAN IN SPRING COUNTY, by Joseph Kirkland, published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. This is a genuine western novel. It has the true local color, and smacks of the soil. Mr. Kirkland is not the coming American novelist. He is inferior to many workers in the same field, but he has given his readers a vigorous, breezy, thoroughly interesting story. The author of a book like "Zury" should let the public hear from him again.

THE STORY OF MARGARET KENT, by Henry Hayes, is a pleasant story for summer reading. Without bordering on the sensational, the interest of the narrative is sustained from first to last.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL, by Stilson Hutchins and Joseph West Moore, is an illustrated history of the past and present of Washington city. The illustrations are numerous, and give an accurate idea of the appearance of the public buildings, private residences, statues, parks and streets. The historical narrative is entertaining, and much of it will be new to the reading public. The next thing to visiting Washington is to get a copy of this work and give it an attentive examination. Colonel W. F. Moore, the popular Washington subscription book manager, handles this book, and has an Atlanta agency conducted by Captain C. B. Dutcher.

News and Notes.

"Mosby's War Reminiscences, and Stuart's Cavalry Campaigns," by John S. Mosby, is announced by George A. Jones & Co., of Boston.

Two gentlemen connected with the British Museum are preparing a work on original charters from the conquest to the death of King John.

A new work by Mr. Cosmo Monkhouse, on "Italian Pre-Raphaelites in the National Gallery," is found among Cassell & Co.'s announcements.

Mr. H. M. Trollope, the eldest son of the late Anthony Trollope, has just made his first attempt at fiction in the form of a novel named "My Own Love Story."

The anonymous New York novel, lately published under the title "Two Gentlemen of Gotham," is said to be the combined work of a Mr. Cabot and a Mr. Coghill.

Mr. William Cushing has been compelled, for reasons not stated, to abandon the publication of his proposed "Anonyms" as a companion to his "Pseudonyms."

The London Morning Post declares of Mr. Crawford's "Saracinesca" that no better picture has been drawn of Roman society since the publication of M. About's delightful tale "Tolla."

Mr. Ruskin writes that he intends to carry his autobiography no further than 1875, and he has concluded to abandon the projected work, "Our Fathers Have Told Us"—"the more," he adds, "that I perceive the new generation cares nothing about what its fathers either did or said."

A small volume describing the provincial tour of Spakspeare and his company of actors has been privately issued by Mr. Halliwell Phillips. It shows that the troupe visited many towns which in these days have no theatrical representations.

A new novel by Judge A. W. Tourgee, called "Button's Inn," will be issued immediately by Roberts Bros. In it the author uses his knowledge of local history to depict the region around Chautauqua and lake Erie during the years 1815–1830, just before the stagecoach made way for the locomotive.

Mr. W. C. Beecher, the son of the late Brooklyn clergyman, who, together with his mother and brother-in-law, is preparing the only authorized life of his father, announces that the work will be simply a continuation of the autobiography upon which his father was engaged, completed, "as nearly as we can along the lines he has indicated."

Walt Whitman's "Specimen Days in America" (sic) is to be the June volume of the Camelot-Classics, says The Athenæum. It adds: "The reprint will be issued under an arrangement with the author, who has written specially for it an address to the British public. The widespread sympathy and esteem evinced by his English admirers have greatly touched as well as cheered the veteran poet."

A volume of poems, by Mrs. Margaret J. Preston, entitled "Colonial Ballads, Sonnets, and Other Verse," is in the press of Houghton, Mifflin & Co. It is not a "compilation," as has been erroneously stated, but a volume of fresh matter, never before collected. It will be out early in May. Mrs. Preston is not blind, as has been reported; but from having overtaxed her eyes, has had to do all her literary work, for some time, through an amanuensis.

Mr. Laurence Oliphant's new book, which Harper & Bros. will have ready next week, promises to be one of the most delightful of the many readable books he has written. It is called "Episodes in a Life of Adventure; or Moss from a Rolling Stone." Mr. Oliphant argues that a rolling stone does gather moss; he meets with adventures, acquires experiences, and gains a general knowledge of the world, the whole contributing to form a rich fund of reminiscences.

The Athenæum says: That "Dr. Westland Marston has received a tribute from America in memory of his son in the shape of a large lyre of white immortelles, with "Marston" in purple flowers across the strings. It was sent as an emblem of the sorrow and sympathy felt by many admirers of the deceased poet in the state of Georgia, members of the Hayne Literary Club. A strong friendship existed between the late Hamilton Hayne and Philip Marston, and the tribute is partly sent in recognition of this circumstance."

Mr. W. H. Riding says in the Critic: I hear of a cook the copyright on which I am assured on the best authority yields its author $12,000 a year. Is it a novel, a play, a poem, this literary philosopher's stone? No; it is a work on the 'Mind Cure,' or as the author prefers to call it, 'Christian Science.' The first edition of the book appeared in 1875 and excited but little notice. Since then, however, it has passed through twenty-four editions and its lucky author is now able to dictate terms to the trade. My authority for this is Mr. Cupples, who is busy at his new publishing and bookselling house on Boylston street; and in speaking of him I am reminded of the new firm of Laughton, Macdonald & Co., which will soon bring out the fourth and concluding volumes of the 'Dictionary of the Anonymous and Pseudonymous Literature of Great Britain,' which they publish by arrangements with Paterson, of Edinburgh.

Miss Helen Gray Cone and Miss Jeannette L Gilder have for some time been at work upon a book that is likely to prove both popular and entertaining. It will be in two volumes, entitled "Pen Portraits of Literary Women." These portraits are drawn either by the women themselves or by their contemporaries. With two exceptions, George Sand and Harriet Beecher Stowe, the subjects are English, and the line extends from Hannah More to George Eliot. Each woman will be given a concise biographical sketch, supplemented by descriptive anecdotes, culled from many sources There are numerous such volumes devoted to literary men, but the publishers, Cassell & Co., believe that this is the first of its kind exclusively given over to women.

NEWS NOTES.

H. Rider Haggard says in the Contemporary Review: Surely, what is wanted in English fiction is a higher ideal and more freedom to work it out. It is impossible, or, if not impossible, it requires the very highest genius, such as, perhaps, no writers possess today, to build up a really first-class work without the necessary materials in their due proportion. As it is, in this country, while crime may be used to any extent, passion in its fiercer and deeper forms is scarcely available, unless it is made to receive some conventional sanction. For instance, the right of dealing with bigamy is by custom conceded to the writer of romance, because in cases of bigamy vice has received the conventional sanction of marriage. True, the marriage is a mock one, but such as it is, it provides the necessary cloak. But let him beware how he deals with the same subject when the sinner of the piece has not added a sham or a bigamous marriage to his evil doings, for the book will in this case be certainly called immoral. English life is surrounded by conventionalism, and English fiction has come to reflect the conventionalism, not the life, and has in consequence, with some notable exceptions, got into a very poor way, both as regards art and interest.

If this moderate and proper freedom is denied to imaginative literature alone among the arts (for, though Mr. Horsley does not approve of it, sculptors may still model from the naked), it seems probable that the usual results will follow. There will be a great reaction, the Young Person will vanish into space and be no more seen, and naturalism in all its horror will take its root among us. At present it is only in the French tongue that people read about the inner mysteries of life in brothels, or follow the interesting study of the passions of senile and worn-out debauchees. By and by, if liberty is denied, they will read in the English. Art in the purity of its idealized truth should resemble some perfect Grecian statue. It should be cold but naked, and looking thereon men should be led to think of naught but beauty. Here, however, we satire art in every sort of dress, some of them suggestive enough in their own way, but for the most part in a pinafore. The difference between literary art, as the present writer submits it ought to be, and the naturalistic art of France is the difference between the Venus of Milo and an obscene photograph taken from the life. It seems probable that the English-speaking people will in the course of time have to choose between the two.

ANGOSTURABITTERS is a household word all over the world. For over fifty years it has advertised itself by merit. It is now advertised to warn the public against counterfeits. The genuine article is manufactured by Dr. J. G. B. Siegert & Sons.

BIG REAL ESTATE SALE

—BY—

Capitol City Land Improvement Company.

H. L. WILSON, Auctioneer,

Wednesday, May 25 at 3 O'Clock

ON

Georgia Avenue, Washington and Pryor Streets,

Capitol Ave. and Crew Street,

29 Magnificent Vacant Lots

THIS IS THE MOST DESIRABLE UNIMPROVED property in the southern part of the city. These broad and beautifully graded and paved avenues have really no superiors in Atlanta. Street cars, gas and water surrounds each block. Just think of the great convenience. Curbing and sidewalks equal to those in the very heart of the city. Grant's park is only a few blocks away, with cars at your very door to take you for one nickel to that delightful and healthful resort. Arrangements are now being perfected to place electric motors on these splendid lines by which you can be taken from the Kimball house to the park in fifteen minutes, with cars leaving every seven and a half minutes. Capitol avenue and Washington streets leads from this property directly to the state capitol, now being built at a cost of $1,000,000, and no finer graded and paved street can be found in Georgia. Then be at the sale and secure you a first class lot at low figures, and build a sweet, cozy home. Why pay $7,000 and $8,000 for a vacant lot when you can buy for less money in this desirable and elegant neighborhood? Real estate is just blooming into appreciation in this beautiful south land, because it has never been on the market before. In a very few years it will sell at twice the money it brings now. Then get a plat and go upon the grounds and select your lot and have the nerve to buy it. Terms ¼ cash, balance in 1, 2, and 3 years, with 8 per cent interest, or all cash at the option of the purchaser.

GREAT LAND SALE AT EAST SHEFFIELD, ALA.

JUNE 9th, 1887.

I WILL SELL UPON THE PREMISES AT 10 A. M., JUNE 9TH, PORTIONS OF 1,200 ACRES OF BEAUTIFULLY SITUATED LAND, DIVIDED INTO blocks, lots, wide avenues, streets, alleys, etc., as shown in plats, traversed by street cars and three railroad lines, giving direct connection with Sheffield, Florence, and Tuscumbia, and wharf privileges on Tennessee river.

This property adjoins the city of Sheffield, which has had such a marvelous growth since the great auction sale of May 8th, 9th and 10th, 1884, when the corn and cotton stalks stood there. Fine hotels, stores, elegant homes, tasty cottages, railroad shops, five iron furnaces, foundries, machine shops, street cars, water and gas mains, brick sidewalks are now in existence and being constructed, and thousands of men are at work rapidly building up a great city, and new railroad connections are being rapidly constructed.

The lines to Birmingham, Nashville and Aberdeen are in progress, while others are in contemplation and will be finished in the near future. The new roads besides the M. & C. and the 15,000 miles of assured water navigation furnish uninterrupted cheap transportation to all the great cities and across to the Mississippi river, giving Sheffield a position among the new and old cities now boomed with the life, enterprise and brains of the new south that is attracting investments from all parts of the country.

Sheffield has not paraded her advantages much, but her managers have bided their time, gone to work, put down their money, and a great, vigorous, growing city is the result.

The company will remit one-half the purchase price to those who build on lot bought within 12 months, and one-fourth the price to those who build in 18 months.

A large crowd is expected, and the railroads will charge only one fare for round trip to and from Tuscumbia.

The lots will be sold on their merits, with perfect title. Terms—one-fourth cash, balance in one, two and three years, with 6 per cent.

West Nashville

IS READY.

The Nashville Land Improvement Company invites all persons interested to take a look at the new town of West Nashville on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday,

May 24, 25, 26 and 27,

when a portion of the property suitable for business and residence sites will be OFFERED AT AUCTION!

The terms of the sale will be 25 per cent down and balance in one, two and three years.

Twenty-five per cent of the proceeds of this sale will be applied in assisting manufacturers locating in West Nashville.

The Nashville Iron, Steel and Charcoal Company, capital stock $700,000, General Willard Warner president, is erecting in West Nashville two fifty-ton charcoal blast furnaces and chemical works covering the treatment of 80,000 cords of wood annually.

Many other concerns have applied for sites, and it is believed that industries employing not less than 500 men will be in operation on the ground before the close of the year.

West Nashville Will be the Charcoal-Iron Center of the South.

Nine-tenths of the manufactured articles now brought from the North and distributed from Nashville will hereafter be produced in this new town.

Situated on the very edge of the great coal and iron deposits of Tennessee, and having close at hand inexhaustible supplies of wood suitable for the manufacture of charcoal and every useful article made in part or whole of wood, West Nashville has all the natural advantages in the way of material that could be desired.

The banks of the Cumberland river, which is navigable for 400 miles above Nashville, are lined with forests of hard wood. Below the city the river affords communication with Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, New Orleans and other large towns. Nashville's railroad facilities are well nigh perfect.

As a complement to these advantages, Nashville has the best equipment for the transaction of business to be found in the South. As an educational and social center the city is without a superior in the United States.

West Nashville, which will be substantially a part of the old city, will enjoy all these advantages.

For the accommodation of persons desiring to attend the auction sale of lots, May 24, 25, 26 and 27,

Excursion Trains Will Be Run from various parts of the country, and free transportation will be furnished from Nashville to West Nashville and return on the days of the sale.

WHY WILL YOU LET YOUR LITTLE ONE SUFFER?

MANY children suffer from day to day—fretful cross and peevish—and the cause of their suffering is not suspected. A pallid and sickly countenance, irregularity of appetite or great voracity, bad breath, foul tongue, great thirst, gradual emaciation, irritable temper, redness of nostrils, disposition to be picking the nose, are all symptoms indicating the presence of Worms! If any of these symptoms are noticed or Worms are suspected, procure a package of GRANDMOTHER'S WORM POWDERS, which costs but 25 cents, and give it according to directions. If any Worms are present they will soon be expelled, and you will have the satisfaction of seeing your darling restored to health again. If there are no Worms present, the Remedy will do no harm, but will move the bowels gently and leave the system in a healthy condition. No Castor Oil or Purgative Medicine is required with it. It should be in every family. Try it! Try it!! Try it!!!

Atlanta, Ga,

Dear Sir: I have used "Grandmother's Worm Powders" in my family for ten years, and during that time have not had a doctor with my children. If they are at all sick I give them a Powder, and after it acts they are relieved. Respectfully,

Mrs. Lavinia Rhodes.

If your druggist does not keep them, insist upon his ordering them.

WARREN LAVELLE.

A WILD STORY OF THE LATE CIVIL WAR.

History of Outrage, Murder and Terrible Revenges as told by One of the Notorious Quantrell's Daring Lieutenants—A Price Put Upon Head—He Escapes Into Mexico.

GUZANNE, WYOMING COUNTY, W. Va., May 1.

Sevral years since I was traveling through the interior of West Virginia on horseback, and a difficult, lonely undertaking it was, traveling over the mountains 3,000 feet above the level of the sea, and through almost interminable forests of trees, and across swiftly running streams, with seldom a human habitation in sight. However, it is not the geography of the mountain state I propose to describe, but to tell the history as it was given me of a man who was a deep, unreadable mystery to all who ever knew or heard of him in these depths of nature's primitive mountains. I had been riding and walking all day, from six o'clock in the morning until five in the evening, with but half an hour's rest for myself and horse. During the entire day's travel I had seen but two people, both of whom were hunters. Both these men had been passed while traveling along the top of the mountain during the morning, and I now was approaching the foot of that mountain, down in what seemed to me, a

DARK, SOMBER, FORBIDDING DEPTH, with no sign of habitation. The oppressive feeling did not decrease as I got to the foot of the mountain, where I found a narrow trail or path leading along the banks of a deep brook, barely discernable occasionally through the thick tangle of brush which lined its banks. A half-hour's ride brought me to a narrow opening or clearing, in the center of which stood a small, one story log cabin. Of course, the sight of the clearing and the cabin was a grateful one, which roused me from that oppressive despondency so peculiar, yet so common, to travelers under like circumstances. I rode up to the cabin and halloaed, to the occupants. In a moment the door opened, and a tall man stood before me. I explained to him my hungry and tired condition, and was invited to alight and enter. After tying up my horse, and throwing before him an armful of fodder and a feed of corn, I walked into the cabin and sat down. My host was a man among a thousand—tall, somewhat gray, about fifty years of age in appearance. He had the keenest pair of eyes I ever saw. They were a deep blue, and their glance appeared to penetrate clear through me and to lay bare my very thoughts. He appeared satisfied with his scrutiny in a moment, when he turned about and directly set before me a supper of fish, venison and corn-bread. I fell to and ate heartily, only addressing a few commonplace words during the meal. I was hungry, and he was seemingly averse to much talk. After supper we struck up a conversation, with the country round about as a subject. He showed a wonderful acquaintance with the wild mountains, valleys and streams. During the conversation—how I do not remember—the subject of the late war came up. On this subject I did pretty much all the talking in telling my host how in the lapse of time the miserable fraternal hatred and discord had become healed over; how the blue and gray annually met in a re-union of both to talk of old battles and strifes and to renew their pledges of brotherly love. Many instances and dozens of prominent men of both sides come in the review. My host appeared lost in thought for a time. At last he looked up and said:

WHO WOULD ATTRACT ATTENTION

"My friend, I have a life history which I never intended to divulge, but your words have driven a cloud from my mind. I will, if you wish to hear it, tell you as a story as you ever listened to, provided you do not repeat it until after the lapse of two years."

Of course I promised, and the following is the story, many instances of which I have since taken the trouble to investigate and found them exactly as told. It has been a little over two years since they were told me by Lieutenant Warren Lavelle:

"I was seventeen years of age when the war broke out. I am but little over forty-one now, although one would take me to be fifty. At the breaking out of the war I was a slender boy, brought up by my widowed mother, and taught as only a Christian mother teaches her children. I did not enter the army on either side, having, as I saw, many friends and schoolmates in both armies. Our home was on a prairie in Missouri, on one of the most beautiful prairie farms of the interior.

"The armies shifted back and forth, committing many outrages and wrongs—just such things as are always found in the wake of hostile armies. For a year we escaped, and I thought we were perfectly safe from injury from either side, when one day, during my absence in a neighboring town, a union force, commanded by a man who lived in the neighborhood, went to our home and killed my mother and two sisters. I found the house a piles of ashes and burning coals when I returned. It would be useless for me to undertake to describe my feelings. I will not try to do it, but let my after deeds answer for a description. The dead bodies of my mother and sisters I found in the orchard under the trees. My little brother Tom, who was thirteen years old, I found a half hour later still living, but shot and bayoneted in half a dozen parts of the body. He was almost dead, but lived long enough to tell me an awful story of

OUTRAGE AND MURDER.

With dry eyes I could not shed a tear. My whole being seemed to have undergone complete change. From a pure-minded, simple country boy I had been transformed into a demon. I dug a wide grave, buried my only relatives side by side, and marked their graves, after which I mounted my horse and started for my nearest neighbors', who were three boys of about my age. To them I told my story, and they agreed to go with me. In three days' time I had thirty-five young men, well armed, in my command. We found with very little trouble where Quantrell's band was in Kansas, and in a few days joined them. To Quantrell I told my story, and at his request took command of my little company. All of my force were splendid shots and riders. We carried, besides rifles, a pair of Colt's revolvers, with extra sets of cylinders.

"When in action we took the bridles of our well-trained horses in our mouths, and, with pistol in each hand, would ride through or over our enemies, emptying our pistols at close quarters. When the loads were all discharged a quick manipulation of the barrel would pull the pin which held the cylinders, which would be dropped into an empty pocket and fresh ones replaced. By this means, after constant drill, we were able to keep up a continuous fusillade.

'Do you remember the battle near Mexico, Mo., where a whole battalion of union forces was wiped out? It was done this way: A small squad of twenty-five men were ordered to approach within sight of the enemy, whose forces and armament were known to us, and upon their approach to retreat before them several miles to a narrow lane lined on both sides with an impenetrable hedge fence. When at a certain spot they were to turn and CHARGE THE ENEMY.

I led the little company of twenty-five, all of whom belonged to my command. The enemy fell into the trap. After catching sight of us they gave quick pursuit. With our splendid horses we had no difficulty in keeping a quarter of a mile or more ahead of them. Right into the lane we galloped, as though only intent on getting away, until we had gone about a mile, when I gave the command to halt. We had barely turned face toward the enemy when I heard the quick rattle of shots in their rear. 'Charge!' With a rush we were upon them and gave them half a dozen rounds, piling up men and horses in a confused, cursing, groaning mass. The next command placed my men in single file along either side, close up to the hedge. There, while the enemy were pouring their fire down the center of the lane, we stood for a minute or two quickly pouring into their ranks

DEADLY VOLLEYS.

The ambuscade, with the hot reception, threw them into a panic, and we saw the victory was ours. The ringing command of our leader, 'Kill!' came across the intervening space, and the final charge was made. Not a living enemy was left. All were killed; no prisoners were taken.

"This is a fair sample of the work we did. Every one of us had suffered at their hands, and our only motive was vengeance and blood. After this fight we had many others, losing here and there a comrade, sometimes many, but our ranks were kept pretty well filled with the sort of men we wanted. At the battle of Lone Tree the man who had so deeply wronged me, I learned, was with the enemy. Quantrel allowed the union soldiers to approach so closely that an occasional shot would bring down one of our men. The boys sat firm and quiet, the killing of a friend and comrade only serving to make their eyes flash brighter and their lips to close tighter. When that one word 'Now!' was given what a yell went up as we charged them. Right and left, cutting, slashing, shooting. They were brave fellows, but human nature could not stand before such devils. They began to give, and my mortal enemy was fifty yards away. With a quick command I threw my little company into the shape of a wedge, and we went through their front ranks right into the midst of the company, commanded by the man whose blood I sought. 'Kill, kill, kill!' I screamed. Ah, that was a fight! Down they went, not alone, but still down. Our revolvers were emptied, renewed and emptied again. The third time, however, they broke and ran. I caught up with the man I was after, and, replacing my pistol in its belt, caught him by the long hair, and with my knife had before he could jerk away. He fell to the ground, and I got down and tied him right there amid the whistle of bullets and clash of sabers. Back into the fight. But we had conquered, and, leaving my comrades to follow, I returned to find my prisoner had fainted. I threw water into his face and brought him around. By this time the retreating army were beyond pursuit, leaving their dead scattered along two or three miles. When my command, led by Cherokee Joe, had returned, I took my prisoner to a tree and tied him fast. I had in the meanwhile informed him of my identity and gave him an inkling of his fate. His prayers and appeals were music to me, and his curses an aeolian harp in symphony with my eternal hatred. To be brief, I killed him while an appeal for mercy was issuing from his cursed lips.

"A few weeks after this fight, from our scouts I learned that the remnant of his command were stationed in Arkansas, about thirty miles distant. From Quantrel I got orders to go in that direction and scout. Taking twenty-five men I followed down the bayou, with five Cherokee scouts out ahead. We soon located the enemy on a plantation belonging to a Mr. Taylor, who was friendly to us. We learned that Lieutenant Boriel, with thirty-five men, the remnant of the company, was camped near an old cotton-gin at least a mile in front of the main body. About ten o'clock at night we started, and by one in the morning we had crept within twenty-five yards of the camp-fire, in front of which two sentinels stood on guard. The field in front being open I sent one of my scouts down on the line and found all my men ready, with pistol in each hand. The next moment we started forward, and were within fifteen yards of the sentinel before attracting attention. He never knew what hurt him.

We retreated down the bayou and laid an ambuscade in a thick piece of woods, and were hardly in position when the front of the cavalry arrived in the road opposite us, when we gave them several rattling volleys and emptied a number of saddles. In the confusion we escaped by a by-path, led by our scouts. One month later we had

of that hated company, leaving only five of them alive. Of these two others fell later in the war, and in the last fight we were in the three others were wiped out. I never intended to stop killing until the last man of that set of devils had gone under, or I myself had bitten the dust. After the war was over a reward was offered for me, dead or alive, and I with two others left that part of the country and went to Mexico. After staying some time at Pass del Norte we concluded to go into Chihushua and hunt up some of the old silver mines, formerly worked by the Spaniards. We had many adventures and narrow escapes from the bands of robbers which infest the country, once being captured by them and escaping by killing the guard on a very dark, stormy night. We made friends of the Apache Chief El Cayote, and were never injured by them. We were fortunate enough to locate a rich mine which had not been worked for many years. Our discovery was made by a nearly fatal accident. One day while prospecting, one of my comrades fell into an old shaft which had become overgrown by the chapparal. He struck on a rocky ledge not more than ten feet below, and holding on to the jaggedd rocks yelled for help. Fortunately one of us was near enough to hear his cries, and went to his assistance and drew him out with a lariat We the next day and found rich specimens of silver-bearing ore. After becoming satisfied that we had found a paying mine we left it and went to the city of Mexico, where we formed a syndicate, several Englishmen furnishing the capital. The mine turned out well, and in five years we were all rich men. Our capital was deposited in the Bank of England, where mine is today, with the exception of several thousand pounds which I invested in a sheep ranch in Australia.

"Two years ago last spring I became restless, and longed for another sight of my old home. The feeling became at last so overpowering that I finally hunted up a good overseer and placed him in charge of my ranche, with orders to deposit all profits in a bank at Sydney, and to conduct the establishment until my return, which I told him might not be for three years. I returned to America quietly and unknown, traveled through Missouri to my old home, viewed the resting place of my people, and made myself known to but three of my old comrades, one of whom resides near Lexington, Mo. From there I came east, and, by a mere freak, entered the wilds of West Virginia, where I have been, on this spot, ever since. My pilgrimage is now over, and I will return to civilization with you in the morning, and from thence go back to Australia."

The next morning we left the place, my host taking nothing but a plain hunting suit of homespun, his horse and a pair of uglylooking pistols. Our trip to the line of railroad was void of interest beyond that I felt in the man himself whose great magnetism and force of character kept me constantly wondering who and what he was, for I felt perfectly satisfied that he had concealed his real identity. When we arrived at the railroad my companion purchased a ticket for New York, and just before the train started, turned, shook me by the hand and said: "I am not the only man yet living who succeeded in gaining notoriety during the war. Many, I suppose most people, fully believe Quantrel himself was killed, but you may entertain serious doubts even of that."

That was the last I ever saw of him.

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK ON THE SOCIAL SIDE OF LIFE.

A Number of Pleasant Paragraphs About the Happenings in Society Circles—The Meetings of Clubs—Several Weddings, Past and in Prospect—Notes of Various Sorts.

On last Tuesday night a dalightful moonlight excursion and dance was given at Ponce de Leon. The party, which consisted of fifteen couples, was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. John Corrigan, Mrs. Berry and Mrs. McDonald. Upon arriving at Ponce de Leon an excellent orchestra was found awaiting the party, the pavilion and grounds were beautifully illuminated with Japanese lanterns, and the evening was spent to the delight of all in dancing, promenading, swinging, etc. At twelve o'clock an excellent repast was served in the dining rooms of the pavilion. Among those present were the following: Misses Maggie and May McDonald, Miss Nora Daly, Miss Marie Holliday, Miss Maggie Lynch, Miss Katie White, Misses Tessie and Katie Deihl, Misses Kate and Alice Lynan, Miss Monica Bloomfield and Miss Lizzie Dickinson. The gentlemen were Messrs. H. Lynan, M. Mahony, E. Mahony, T. James, J. Gatins, J. Holliday, T. Hastings Bain, R. Schmidt and J. Higgins.

Mr. Geo. B. Mulligan and Miss Lillie B. Baker, both of Atlanta, were united in marriage in this city on April 19 last by the Rev. Dr. Henry McDonald. Both bride and groom are well known in Atlanta, and their many friends wish them a happy life.

The Ylo club held their regular meeting last Thursday night at the residence of Mr. W. C. McDade, 105 W. Harris. The programme was one of unusual interest and all spent a pleasant time. The badge offered by Stevens & Bro., jewelers, was won by Miss Maggie Payne, secretary of the Ylo, who made 4012 words out of the name given. The Ylo will meet May 26, at Mr. Morris's, 104 West Harris street.

One of the pleasantest social events of the week was the art reception by Mr. Ver Bryck at his studio, 34½ Peachtree street. The throng that crowded his rooms was a gratifying tribute paid to his genius, and the clearest proof that the citizens of Atlanta possess superior taste and judgment.

On the walls and on easels were rare works of art that have been exhibited in New York and most cities of the United States, all from the brush of the celebrated painter, who is now in Atlanta for a short time. Among the numerous pictures an ideal piece elicited the most praise—"Cupid in Ambush." The mischievous little urchin is depicted peeping from behind a rose-girdled tree, with an exceedingly arch expression, while the merry twinkle in his eye indicates that he has discovered an unsuspecting victim. He conceals behind his back an arrow, evidently awaiting a favorable opportunity to use it.

Mr. Ver Bryck is particularly happy in the delineation of female heads. The delicacy of his coloring, subdued and harmonious, the splendor of his tints, combine to made him worthily called the "American Bouguereau," and he has been selected to paint many of the most famous beauties of the day. In his studio you bask in the radiance of soft eyes, and sunny hair, and you stand amazed in a wilderness of beauty by which no mortal can fail to be happily influenced. Atlanta should feel proud that such an artist as Mr. Ver Bryck should consider this a worthy field for his talents, and an effort should be made to justify him remaining here and establishing a studio, as a permanent benefit and an attraction to the city.

Miss Fannie Saye was married Tuesday evening to Mr. E. L. Sutton at the Third Presbyterian church. The ceremony was performed by the pastor Rev. N. Keff Smith. The church was filled with friends and acquaintances of the happy couple. Beautiful flowers and evergreens were placed around the altar; and the walls of the church were tastefully decorated. After the ceremony a reception was given at 269 Luckie. The reception was largely attended and it was a late hour when the guests dispersed. Both Mr. Sutton and his bride are well known in the city and have many friends who wish them a long life and happiness. They received numerous very handsome presents.

Monday at the residence of Mrs. F. M. Aikin, on Stonewal street, Miss Ella Bookout was married to Mr. Edgar Ridgeway, of West Point. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. C. Dunlap. Quite a number of friends were present, and after the ceremony all were invited to the dining room where a delicious dinner was served. Mr. Ridgeway is a rising young man of West Point, and his bride is a young lady who is much admired by all who know her. The couple left Monday afternoon for West Point, where they will reside in the future.

Tuesday evening Miss Etta Garrett was married to Mr. Frank Boyd, of Montgomery. The marriage took place at the residence of the bride's aunt on Davis street, and was performed by Rev. J. W. Lee, of Trinity church. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd left Tuesday night for Montgomery, their future home.

The Conversazione society met last Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. M. A. Watts, on Luckie street, and spent a most delightful time in social conversation and general enjoyment. The following programme, which was short but interesting, was rendered:

Music—Miss Lillie Buice.
Recitation—Miss Minnie Henderson.
Music—Mr. L. W. Arnold.
Reading—Miss Romie Culberson.
Music by the quartette.
Reading—Mr. A. V. Baisden.

The society will hereafter meet semi-monthly instead of weekly. The next meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. Ivy, 113 Walton street, May 24th.

The North Side german club will give a picnic Wednesday to Vinings station. Music will be in attendance and dancing will be the programme for the day.

The E. T. club will give its annual picnic Friday the 28th instant at Vinings station. A large number will attend and the occasion will be a very pleasant one.

On Tuesday morning at the residence of the bride's parents, Miss Leila, daughter of Mr. and Mrs W. T. McWilliams, was united in marriage to Mr. George W. Campbell, of Birmingham. The ceremony was performed in a beautiful and impressive manner by Rev. Dr. R. B. Headden, of the First Baptist church. The fair bride is one of Rome's loveliest and most popular young ladies, and she will be sadly missed in social circles. The groom is a prominent young business man of Birmingham, and has hosts of friends. Among those present at the marriage were Messrs. J. W. Beard, W. P. Ward, J. C. Smith, S. E. Jones and B. D. Whilden, of Birmingham, and Miss Whilden, of South Carolina. Shortly after the ceremony the young couple left for Washington, New York and other eastern cities. They will embark for Europe on the steamer "City of Rome" on the 27th inst. The high esteem in which the bride and groom are held was shown by the magnificent bridal gifts, of which the following is a partial list: Mr. W. T. McWilliams, (the bride's father) a check for $10,000; Mr. W. T. McWilliams, splendid set of diamonds, consisting of star and crescent pin, solitaire ear rings, cluste ring; Miss Alice McWilliams, sterling silver tea service; Bean McWilliams, oesly watch; Miss Willie McWilliams, sterling silver water service; Mr. and Mrs. O. H. McWilliams; one dozen sterling silver forks; Mr. W. G. McWilliams, and Misses Clelie and Pearl McWilliams, sterling silver table and tea spoons; Mr and Mrs. N. C. Royston, Birmingham, sterling silver service; B. D. Whildon, pony and dog cart; Mrs. A. G. Ware, Birmingham, handsome china dinner and tea set; Mrs. J. W. Beard, and W. P. Ward, fine bronze clock; Messrs. J. C. Smith and S. C. Jones, easel and steel engraving; Mrs. J. W. Ewing, china card receiver; Mrs. L. A. Dean, pair unique vases; Mrs. E. H. Colcough, silver spoon holder; Mr. E. H. Colclough, manacure set; Miss Mattie Battey, silver coffee spoon; H. W. Perry & Co., Birmingham, silver jewel case.

Mr J. W. Veal, of Atlanta, visited his father here this week.

For six years I have been suffering. During these long years I was treated by prominent physicians in this city and Columbus, Ga., without material benefit. This spring I employed Atlanta's distinguished female specialist, Dr. Rosa Freudenthal, 16½ N. Forsyth street, opposite First Baptist church, and under her skillful treatment I have been restored to perfect health. I will take pleasure in verifying all I say in this certificate, and really a great deal more. MRS. M. V. COLEMAN, 60½ Whitehall street, Atlanta.

Colonel L. J. Allred Writes.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years of that time I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases and got no permanent relief. About one year ago I grew much worse, the diseases assuming a more severe and dangerous form. I became very weak and lost flesh rapidly, until in November I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and I now feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life. L. J. ALLRED.

The Reason Why

Ayer's Pills are so popular is, that while always reliable as a cathartic medicine, they never leave any ill effects. This is because they are purely vegetable, and entirely free from calomel or any other dangerous drug. In all cases, therefore, whether the patient be old or young, they may be confidently administered.

In the Southern and Western States, where derangements of the liver are so general, Ayer's Pills have proved an inestimable blessing. D. W. Baine, New Berne, N. C., writes:

"I suffered a long time with stomach and liver troubles. I tried various remedies, but received no benefit until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. These pills benefited me at once. I took them regularly for a few months, and my health was completely restored."

Throughout New England, next to lung diseases, Stomach and Bowel Complaints are the most prevalent.

Dyspepsia

and Constipation are almost universal. Mr. Gallacher, a practical chemist, of Roxbury, Mass., who was long troubled with Dyspepsia, writes:

"A friend induced me to try Ayer's Pills, and, after taking one box without much benefit, I was disposed to quit them; but he urged perseverance, and, before I had finished the second box, I began to experience relief. I continued taking them, at intervals, until I had used eleven boxes. Suffice it to say, that I am now a well man, and grateful to your chemistry, which outstrips mine."

The head and stomach are always in sympathy; hence the cause of most of those distressing headaches, to which so many, especially women, are subject. Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes that for years she was a martyr to headache, and never found anything to give her more than temporary relief, until she began taking Ayer's Pills, since which she has been in the enjoyment of perfect health.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S

Oriental Cream, or Magical Beautifier.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles Moth Patches, Rash and Skin diseases and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 30 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar names the distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayer said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin.

NOVELTIES,

out, but succeeded in getting for "Spot Cash" direct from the American manufacturers and foreign importing agents, some very large lots of goods so low that you will be only too glad to buy them at our prices, if you will only call and look at them.

They are no one-cent-a-yard Lawns and two-cent Calicoes, but good, nice goods well worth buying.

We can mention only a few of these Bargains.

We are the only agents in Atlanta for the Mother's Friend Patent Boy's Shirt Waists. You will not need to sew buttons on them.
M. RICH & BROS.

3,000 yards plain Persian Lawn, all white, at 12½ cents, former price 25 cents.

2,000 yards Plaid French Organdies at 25 cents, sold everywhere at 40 cents.

Our 25 cent Satines are worth 35 cents.

Satines we sell at 12½ cents are worth 20 cents.

3,500 yards Cable Cord Ginghams at 12½ cents; they are all new styles.

Lovely Batistes at 15 cents.

We bought 50 Spring Combination Suits at positively 50 cents on the dollar. Just think, you can buy a $20 suit for $10, a $25 suit for $12 50, a $30 suit for $15, etc., etc.

SILKS, SILKS, SILKS.

Beautiful Moires, plaid and striped Surahs fancy Foulards, Jersey and India Silks at prices you never saw new goods sold at before.

We have a few 10 to 15 yard lengths of Black Silks that we offer to close out among our remnants at 50 cents on the dollar.

20 shades of fine Plushes for fancy work at $1.50 per yard, You have been paying $2.50 per yard for the same goods.

We have the largest stock of

PARASOLS
—AND—

ever brought to this city. If you will call on us we will save you 25 per cent on them.

We offer you a regular 20 cents Jap Fan at 10 cents. Our 15 cents Fans are cheap at 25 cents. We have them up to 75 cents, worth $1 25.

We can show you the largest line of

GAUZE, FEATHER,
SILL and SATIN FANS

you ever saw. Our low prices are bound to sell them.

We are agents for the well-known Domestic Paper Patterns. They are the best to buy.

The most Durable, Healthful and Prettiest Goods in the market.
For sale only by us in Atlanta.

M. RICH & BROS.

D. H. Dougherty & Co.

The Constitution readers have paid us noble tribute of late. We have announced our bargains and they have swarmed within our doors with a mighty shout and will now come again this week, and we will actually surprise you. We don't mean ever to deceive, but actually give and show greater bargains than we advertise.

Dress Goods of every grade and style, Silks, Satins, Striped and Plain Velvets, Morie Silks.

Passementary and Bead Trimmings, also Braid Trimmings.

We have an endless variety in the above lines of goods, and have fully made up our minds to sell them. If you need them and will give us a chance you may expect to buy them cheap, yes, at fearfully reduced prices.

PARASOLS---An immense shipment of choice novelties at prices very little over one-half what they were sold for at the first of the season.

WHITE GOODS in immense variety, beautiful new designs, and for less prices than are named by any house in the South. Big and surprising bargains all through this stock. White Goods and Laces are our fort and we lead the town on low prices.

LACES, FLOUNCING, Black, Cream and Colors, all over laces, in every color and style, laces for trimming. We have no competition on these goods in the way of low prices.

New Gloves and Mits.

Choice New Hosiery.

REMNANTS of Worsted Dress Goods and Silk remnants, most of them in good lengths, and at the prices we are selling these goods you can get a beautiful dress for almost nothing:

AGAIN

We call attention to Figured, White and Colored Lawns and Muslins, for they are so handsome and cheap that we want everybody to know---it is generally known what is meant when we say low prices.

FANS!

White Fancy of every style and price. We are showing more real handsome novelties in Fans than we have ever shown in any three former seasons and the prices are but little over half.

SILK MITS.

In great variety, in Cream, White and Colored

NOVELTIES

In White Goods, Lawns, Swiss and Mull Embroideries. Also 45-inch Flouncings and 27-inch Allover in Lace and Embroideries.

REMNANTS AGAIN!

Remnants in Table Linens.
Remnants in Worsted Dress Goods.
Remnants in beautiful Trimming Silk.
Remnants in Black and Colored Dress Silks.
Also a big lot of remnants in pant goods.

All of the above remnants are new goods, having been cut from our recent enormous sales. We are going to sell them at just half the regular price. They will do you good.

SHOES!

We don't ask anybody any odds in shoes, and never have. We know we have more shoes and better shoes for the money than any house in the country. Slippers 5, 25 and 50c. Newport Ties 75c. Our ladies' Kid and pebble for $1, $1.50 and $2 can't be touched. Men's Shoes in abundance, and the best $3 men's Gaiter on earth.

A REMNANT RESUME.

We are going to sweep creation this week on white and figured lawns. Take our word for it. Remnants of silk dress goods and table linens.

Now remember that this remnant sale was never undertaken in Atlanta as we shall present it. We mean to come so nearly giving goods away that you'll come up and voluntarily offer us more money for them.

REAL ESTATE TITLES.

The Dangers and Difficulties Attendant on Their Examination---A Remedy at Hand.

That the titles to real estate in Fulton county are in such a condition as to render their successful and accurate examination a work attended with many difficulties and great risks is a fact well known to those whose business has required them to investigate the subject. Every lawyer and conveyancer recognizes the danger, and the longer his experience and the larger his practice the more ready he will be to confess that no title is ever passed, even by competent counsel, without the lurking fear that there may be some undiscovered error, some overlooked incumbrance which may arise to trouble him hereafter.

This state of affairs is not unusual in any large city by reason of the rapid accumulation of land records, caused by the multiplicity of transfers and the great bulk of litigation. But it is especially true of this city and county that such difficulties and risks are largely augmented by reason of the unfortunate loss of a portion of the records.

It is a matter of great importance, therefore, that some remedy be devised for existing evils, great and almost unsurmountable at present, and rapidly increasing every day. Otherwise the result is bound to embarrass transactions in real estate, thus depreciating its value and striking at the very foundation of all material prosperity and essential confidence in investments.

It is with great pleasure, therefore, that we notice the formation of a corporation with the object of reducing to the minimum the dangers and difficulties above referred to. The Land Title Warranty and Safe Deposit company of Atlanta is composed exclusively of home men who have never yet been found wanting when the interests of Atlanta were at stake. The officers of the company may be found in its card in another column. Suffice it to say, the names of its stockholders command the confidence of the whole community as to its management and solvency.

This company proposes to examine and pass upon titles to real estate in this county, and if approved, to issue to the owner a certificate of warranty that such title is good, and in case of attack to defend the same and make good any loss, within the amount of the warranty, that may be sustained by the owner in case such attack is successful. If the title is not approved no charge is made for the examination other than for the abstract. For such examination and warranty about the same fee will be charged as it would require to obtain the opinion of competent counsel, but instead of an opinion, which may or may not be of substantial value in case of loss, the company gives a warranty with a solvent and permanent corporation to back it.

The facilities of this company for doing business will be understood when it is known that it owns complete abstracts of all the land records of this county from the time of its organization in 1854 down to date. From this information it expects to prepare local indexes, improved maps of the city, and add all the latest devices in use by abstract companies anywhere.

The company also furnishes abstracts to any property in the county at nominal rates, on which abstracts one can use his own judgment, or obtain the opinion of own his lawyer, if he prefers this to the warranty of the company.

It will be seen, therefore, that this company occupies a field of large usefulness in the community, and its operations will not only greatly facilitate transactions in real estate among our own people, but will inspire confidence in strangers to invest here both by purchase and loan in preference to places where the question of title rests in so much uncertainty.

Thus we have given our readers a general outline of what the company proposes to do with regard to land titles. Any further information as to particulars will be furnished on application to the secretary of the company.

Children Dying.

At this season of the year, when the warm days and cool nights effect the general system and the eating of some simple fruit or even vegetable disarrange the stomach, together with change of water, we hear of so many children dying from bowel troubles. If these fond parents would only think a moment, and have on hand some ready and simple relief for these troubles, how much pain and anxiety would be saved. In the use of Dr. Biggers's Huckleberry Cordial mothers have an unfailing remedy for all bowel troubles, which will at once relieve the child of Cholera Morbus or cramp colic, and the older ones from a disordered condition of the bowels. Keep it on hand, and testify, as others have, of its efficacy.

THE PATENT
WIRE GAUZE OVEN DOOR IS THE LATEST IMPROVEMENT ON THE

It produces Practical Results in Baking and Roasting never before attained in any Cooking Apparatus, and will Revolutionize the Present Methods of Cooking

ITS THEORY

Is, that all Food Baked or Roasted, should be cooked in fresh air freely admitted to the oven. This is done by discarding the close oven door heretofore used, and substituting for it a door containing a sheet of Wire Gauze nearly as large as the door itself.

Through this Gauze Door the air freely circulates, facilitating the process of cooking, and producing food that is unequalled in flavor and nutrition, and actually cooked with less consumption of fuel than in an oven with a closed door.

It makes an enormous saving in the weight of bread.

It also produces larger Loaves of Bread, requires less attention from the cook, and promotes the health of the family by the superior quality of the food cooked in it.
